Earthfest a positive plea for our planet

by LORRAYNE ANTHONY

Staff Reporter

THE EARLY MORNING RAIN cut the humidity, the sun was warm and, despite the abundance of 'friendly flies', it was a perfect day to celebrate the wonders and beauty of the earth.

From paper mache dinosaurs sporting slogans warning "Don't litter or you'll be prehistoric too!" to paper mache race boats, Saturday's Earthfest had it all.

Organized by concerned members of the community and members of the County of Haliburton's Advocates for a Naturally Good Environment (CHANGE), Earthfest was an outdoor fair to celebrate our planet.

Instead of trying to scare people into taking care of the planet, Earthfest emphasized the positive to make us all aware of the intense fragility of our world.

The Eagle Lake Women, one of the first groups in Haliburton to recycle, had an 'ideal kitchen' exhibit. Ruth Still, Pat Burke and Ann McLeod took visitors on the tour of the kitchen, pointing out the three different 'garbage' containers you should have under your sink: One for compost, one for cans and glass and a box for old newspapers.

Home Support budget stresses administration

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Haliburton County Home Support Services spent 75 per cent of its $194,600 budget on administration last year, but a Ministry of Community and Social Affairs program supervisor says this is not out of line with similar organizations.

From April 1, 1989 to March 31, 1990, Home Support spent $49,456 on the direct costs of providing services to its clients. Some of this money was recouped from fees charged.

For instance, Home Support spent $18,454 on meal expenses. Clients of Meals on Wheels paid $21,368 of those costs. (Peterborough accountant Robert Wellstood, who prepared the financial statement, said the difference in revenue was spent on transporting the meals to seniors' homes.)

All the other service costs were: Wheels to Meals, $8,972; Transportation expenses, $5,663; Home Help expenses, $5,283; Drop-in Centre expenses, $2,831; and Trips, $8,253. The revenue under the same categories is identical.

Under administrative costs, some are for upkeep of the Drag River Municipal Building offices, such as $6,300 for rent, $3,447 for telephone, $1,400 on advertising, and $10,248 on postage, office and general.

Most of the other money, however, was spent on staff and training.

In November, the Personnel Committee voted in favour of the following pay increases for staff: Executive director, $27,300 to $29,000 or six per cent; Office co-ordinator, $15,925 to $20,000 or 24 per cent; Volunteer co-ordinator, $15,106 to

Arena costs contribute to Minden's 14.5% rise

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Individual departments almost kept to the seven per cent target, but Anson, Hindon and Minden council had to increase their budget costs by 14.5 per cent.

Most of the increase however, is attributed to the $340,000 which must be spent to repair the arena.

"We played around with that for years and we have to do it now," Reeve Ray Moore said when he introduced the budget last Thursday.

Other factors include a 17.7 per cent increase in the education levy and a 16.5 per cent increase in the county levy.

As well, council didn't want to jeopardize road improvements by making the roads department slash costs to meet Moore's goal of a seven per cent increase. This year council will spend $933,790 on roads and the Ministry of Transportation will provide on $296,000 of those costs. Projects include extension work on the Bobcaygeon Road north.

Fortunately, the Ministry of Health will cover all costs of running the ambulance bases in Minden and Haliburton, which Minden oversees. Health services will cost $1,108,326 this year.

The next largest expenditure—$629,474—is for General Government. This "includes the downtown revitilization PRIDE project of $183,439, of which the Ministry of Municipal Affairs funds half the costs."

Recreational and cultural programs such as the swim program, library, art galler, museum and arena contribute to a $579,800 budget cost (including arena repairs.)

Putting in a new well to supplement the present contribute to the sewer/water costs of $516,194.

Protection to Persons and Property has a budget of $195,594 this year, which includes the cost of a new fire truck. Maintaining parks adds $116,746 to the over-all budget. Environment spending (landfill sites) is $97,300.

Because the municipality is considering the purchase of an industrial park, the Planning and Development budget reached $83,210. Finally, maintaining the three cemeteries will cost $48,175.

Eakins retiring after 5 terms of long hours at Queen's Park

by SALLY RITCHIE

Staff Reporter

The long-standing Member of Provincial Parliament announced last week that he is retiring from politics.

When the next election is called, he will not seek his party's nomination, John Eakins said when he dropped by The Echo last Thursday. Nonetheless, he says he will fulfill his responsibilities right up to the day of the next election.

"There comes a time a person has to think about his future," Eakins says. "You have to stop and say 'I've achieved my objective.'"

The riding will set a date for the end of July for those seeking the Liberal nomination to come forward, he says.

Eakins has represented this riding for the past 15 years. In what's long been Conservative territory, he lost his first two bids in 1967 and 1971, but won in 1975 and was re-elected in the subsequent four elections.

During his terms he has held two cabinet portfolios. In 1985 he was sworn in as Minister of Tourism and Recreation, and he was named Minister of Municipal Affairs in 1987. He held the latter until 1989.

In Opposition, Eakins has been the Critic for Ministries of Industry and Trade, Natural Resources, Transportation, and Tourism and Recreation.

Eakins has found the job rewarding but says, "Few people fully realize how exhausting it is." Although reluctant to reveal his exact age, he says

Education costs up, taxpayers fill the gap

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

In 1990, Haliburton County Board of Education expects to spend $6,360 for each high school student and $4,930 for each student in elementary grades.

And most of the money to pay those costs will come from permanent and seasonal taxpayers. Declining provincial grants are blamed for the shift in financial burden.

"The level of provincial grant has steadily eroded from a high of 55 per cent in the mid-70s to its projected present level of 32 per cent," says a BOE letter to municipalities explaining why the education levies have increased. This decrease cost taxpayers $200,000 in lost revenue in 1989-90. "At the same time, the province requires local school boards to offer more and more services."

All told, provincial initiatives and special projects account for 50 per cent, or $1-million, of the 16 per cent budget increase.

Right now, Grade 1 and 2 classrooms had an average of 24.6 students in 1988. By 1990, school boards were expected to bring that down to 20 students per class. "This has cost our board five additional teachers plus the classroom space. While there is funding for these targets, it does not cover the full cost to the board."

For every seven teachers hired, an additional teacher must be hired because of teachers' demands for preparation time.

With the province's new "hands on" approach to science, science rooms will have to be upgraded in elementary schools. "Although some funding is available, it amounts to less than $3,300 or $2.25 per student."

After the province introduced its Employer Health Tax, which levies employers to pay for employees OHIP, it will cost the board $125,000. And while agreeing in principle to pay equity, "we are concerned with the impact it may have on salary costs. The legislation limits the adjustment to 1 per cent of salary cost each year. For 1990 we estimate the cost to be $80,000."

More students and no capital funding means the board has to buy four portables at a cost of $100,000; nine more teachers need to be hired at a cost of $180,000. Seven classrooms are already being leased in Minden and Haliburton, and the new Library Resource Centre at the high school has $110,000 in debt costs.

"In addition," says the release, "we have to budget items for Health and Safety (Asbestos survey, $50,000), a new parking lot at the high school as a result of lost space due to construction ($75,000) and we have had to budge for the void left with the withdrawal of Kinark services ($30,000 from September to December 1990.)

"Depending on which municipality people live in, the estimated mill rate increase will vary from 10 per cent to 19 per cent. This fluctuation is a result of the province equalizing the tax burden across the county. This is the third year of a five-year phase-in period. In Dysart, it is estimated that the average house (assessed at $700) will pay an additional $55 in education taxes. A house in Anson, Hindon and Minden will pay an additional $80."

Home Support administration accounts for 75% of budget

$17,000 or 13 per cent; and Social recreation co-ordinator, $15,106 to $17,000, or 13 per cent.

Total costs of wages and benefits last year was $83,517.

Other staff and volunteer costs were: Staff training and recruitment, $1,382, down from $2,323; volunteer recognition, $1,553, which didn't exist the year before; Volunteer transportation, $7,774, up from $4,132; Volunteer training and recruitment, $2,192, down from $3,046; and board training and expenses, $2,976. No money was spent on the latter category the previous year.

Another administrative cost was conventions. In her executive director's report, Donna Pacey outlines which conferences were attended. In June, president Adele Barnes, director Alice Martin, Nancy O'Neil and Pacey attended a conference on "Working Together Building the Essential Community Links" in Toronto. Barnes and Pacey also attended a "Community Dialogue on Community Health Centres" in Lindsay. Volunteer co-ordinator Norma Parnell writes she attended the Ontario Association for Volunteer Administrators conference in Peterborough.

In July, Pacey went to a Careertrak seminar for Assertiveness Training for Professionals in Oshawa and Parnell went to a seminar on the One-Minute-Manager in Toronto. In November, past president Helen Henderson and Pacey attended the respite care conference in Toronto.

In December, the board of directors had a special luncheon at the Harvest Dining Lounge. In March, Barnes, volunteer co-ordinator Norma Parnell and Pacey attended a provincial meeting of the Ontario Home Support Association in Picton.

Pacey is also chairman of the Peterborough Area Chapter of the OHSA. Parnell is the staff representative.

But most of the conference budget of $9,262 was spent on hosting an OHSA conference at the PineStone Inn in November. In the previous year, Home Support had spent $2,186 on conferences.

Total administrative expenses were $145,175.

The government is spending more money on community services, says Alan Cavel, the Ministry of Community and Social Services program supervisor responsible for Home Support.

When an agency is new, more money has to be spent on staff and volunteer training, he says. Now that Home Support is 10 years old,, he expects that type of funding will be cut back. COMSOC will gradually be reducing the money available for conferences but will continue to spend money on board development.

As to staff salaries, Cavell says judging them "depends on what a good salary is. Most people complain we never pay enough. Personnel matters are a mandate of the board so they identify job comparisons."

When considering funding applications, "you try to take what they feel are their needs into consideration. We want to make sure there are services being provided and of good quality. the agency has to say how we can provide that."

In August, Cavell will be conducting a review of Home Support—"How the agency does its business, who's on the board, how decisions are made, delivery of services, how do they evaluate themselves... to what extent do board members reflect the views of the public and how are decisions made.

"We have agreed to sit down and do some problem solving."

At the June 6 annual meeting, approximately 20 people walked out when they said president Barnes was denying their right to vote. Cavell knows of the dispute and will discuss that and changing the constitution at future meetings.

Plaza plan stalled

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

It's back to the drawing boards for a developer who was using outdated zoning by-laws for a plaza proposal.

Project Manager Lauren Sorichetti said his client wants to build a plaza on .84 acres of land on the corner of Highway 35 and Prince Street, next to the OPP station.

However, because he was using the former zoning by-laws as a guide to what's permissible, and he hadn't checked with the building by-law officer first, "you might have too large a building for the property," said Reeve Ray Moore.

Under the highway's C3 zoning, buildings can take up no more than 25 per cent of the land. C1 zoning, used downtown, allows more uses for buildings which can go right to the lot lines. Yet rezoning the property would not be easy, Moore cautioned.

As well, because Highway 35 has controlled access, a multi-purpose building cannot have access onto the highway. The developer would therefore have to have access off Prince Street.

This concerned Deputy-reeve Bern Berry and Councillor Bob Sisson. There's a hill at the bottom of Prince Street and in the winter it's often difficult to stop at the highway.

Sorichetti would have saved himself some effort if he had followed proper procedure, council said. Ideas should first be discussed with the by-law officer who knows what is and isn't permissible, and then be introduced at a Planning Advisory Committee. The committee then makes recommendations to council about the proposal.

Sorichetti is now on the agenda for today's (Wednesday) PAC meeting.

Flood victims wonder when help will arrive

by MICHAEL McHUGH
Staff Reporter

Anger and disgust have turned to dismay and desperation as the victims of the Moss's Pond flood continue to wait for help from the municipality.

But the municipality must wait for an engineer's report—which was expected last week—before it can act, said Dysart et al Reeve Bill Davis.

The study was commissioned by council to determine who is to blame for the May 23 flood. A few years ago, the municipality built an access road below a beaver dam. On the Wednesday of the flood, municipal works unplugged the culvert which was to drain water from the pond. Hours later, the road collapsed, sending torrents of water through the village toward Head Lake.

Those most affected by the flood do not understand why the municipality appears to have abandoned them. Council insists it must wait for the report before offering help.

"They could have sent someone down to make us feel better," said Haven Cook of Cook's Fruit and Produce, who echoes the sentiments of many Haliburtonians who suffered as a result of the flood.

The Cooks are at a loss to justify council's reluctance to at least keep them informed.

"If they'd have kept us in touch, we never would have considered litigation," said Cook. "People should stand together."

But Davis says council cannot do anything until the report is finished because any action might be taken the wrong way.

"We are not helping because any helping could be construed as (accepting) liability," he said.

Those businesses affected, however, are less concerned about whose responsible than about being adequately served by their elected officials.

"Even if the municipality's not guilty, they still have a responsibility to the taxpayers," said Beryl O'Connor of Highland Glass and Window. Her employees are still cleaning up and throwing out ruined merchandise.

"You don't have to admit blame by showing concern," responded Haven Cook. He estimates it will cost him about $6000 to replace spoiled produce, fix the contaminated well, and clean up the mess left by the water.

In addition, Cook said he has to bring in a structural engineer to assess damage to his building. Cracks have appeared all around the store, and he is worried the building might break apart.

But while business is bleak for the Cooks, it is non existent for Marianne Cohen who owns Parkside Coin Wash. She said her business has been closed since May 23, and estimates that she could lose upwards of $10,000 per month.

Cohen has decided to let the lawyers decide who is to blame, but said she too has been left to fend for herself without any word on a possible resolution.

She has had estimates of $30,000 to repair her lake-front business, and does not know where the money will come from to pay for it, if it will come at all.

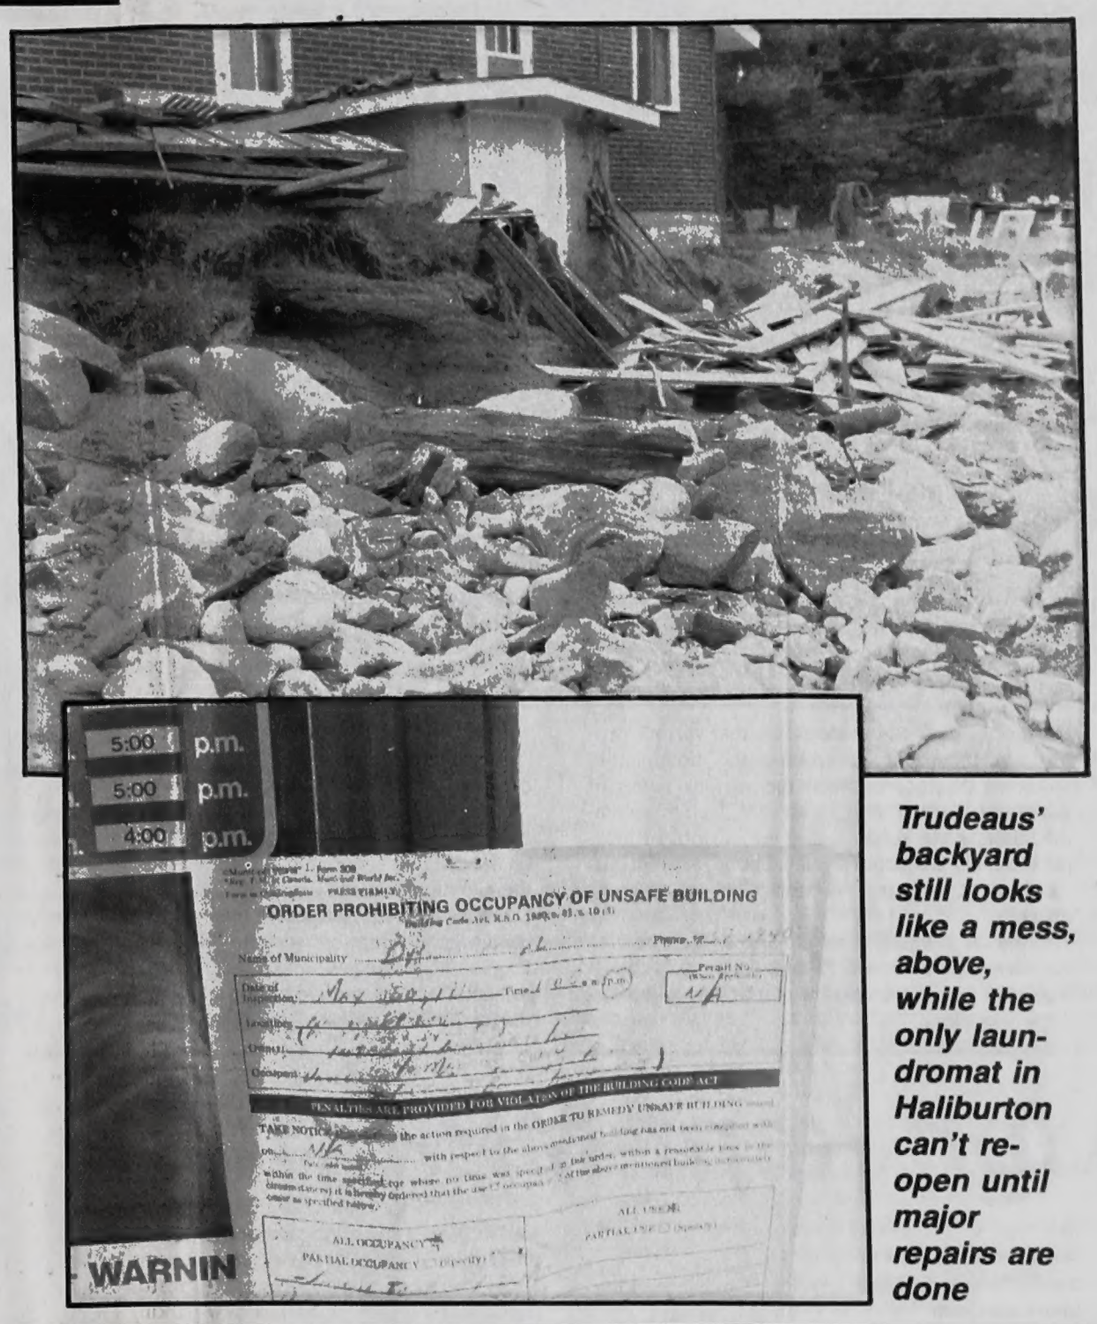
As with many Haliburton business people, Cohen found the winter difficult.

"But I was just starting to feel the excitement of business starting to pick up," she said, when the flood dashed her hopes.

For Viola Trudeau, it is business of another kind as she tries to clean up her backyard and driveway which the flood turned into a huge gutter.

Trudeau said she is still waiting to hear from the municipality.

"You just get your spring cleaning done, and have to start all over again," she said jokingly.



Trudeaus' backyard still looks like a mess, above, while the only laundromat in Haliburton can't reopen until major repairs are done

BIA wants the police to have better presence on Minden's Main Street

MICHAEL McHUGH
Staff Reporter

While drug use along the main strip in Minden has become an issue of late, Haliburton remains relatively free of such concerns.

At last week's Business Improvement Area meeting in Minden, merchants voiced their fears that Main Street had become a haven for teenagers with nothing better to do than hang around the shops and take drugs.

Some BIA members in attendance suggest Minden look into hiring someone to patrol the area on foot, as Haliburton has. They'd also like the OPP to have an increased presence on the main street.

But drugs were not the reason Haliburton wanted a patrolman. In a joint effort between the local BIA and the municipality, a man was hired to protect Highland Street merchants from vandalism, says BIA chairperson Sylvia Holland.

Several stores, including her own, had been broken into and those merchants felt it was time to get more help.

On the topic of drug use downtown, however, Holland says that "no one has brought to my attention that (drug use) is a problem."

"If it's happening, it is more down in the park," she says.

Dysart et al Reeve Bill Davis thinks the area has done what it can do, and must rely on the Ontario Provincial Police to control any drug problem.

"We should all have concerns about drugs," he said, "but that's the mandate of the OPP, not the BIA."

But Davis admits that "The law is complex, and it is hard to catch (those involved)."

Drug-related issues are usually more prevalent in the summer months, explains Anson, Hindon, Minden Reeve Ray Moore, but he is not sure why.

"When we were young, we had to make our own fun," said Moore who does not believe that youths are turning to drugs because there is nothing else to do.

"Our kids have more than we had," he said. "Maybe they have too much money to spend (on drugs)."

But Danny Tate, owner of Beckers' in Minden, thinks he might have a solution. He proposes a non-alcoholic dance club, similar to the one in Stanhope, to give the kids somewhere fun to go. Although nothing is formal yet, Tate said he has received support from some local residents.

Dick Schell's sights turn to Minden as by-law career ends

by MICHAEL McHUGH
Staff Reporter

Veteren municipal worker Dick Schell is moving down the road to Minden where he will trade in his building inspector's cap for a sympathetic ear.

After 17 years of service as a building inspector, dog catcher and by-law enforcer, more than three of which in Dysart et al, Schell will become a case worker for the county's Social Services Department on June 27.

While Schell said he enjoyed his Dysart stay very much, he found trying to fill the many roles asked of him too onerous, especially the inspection of the many new structures.

In the spring of this year, Schell requested more staff but was refused by the municipality. He already had one summer part time worker who looked after parking infringements and canine control, as well as a permanent part time worker who helped out 24 hours per week.

Last December council offered to bump up the part time worker to full time, but at the time Schell figured he could cope.

Dysart, et al Reeve Bill Davis said Schell will be missed.

"It's a loss to us, but the county has gained," he said in praise of Schell, whom he called a "knowledgeable" municipal worker.

Davis said there was no question the municipality needed an additional person, acknowledging that there were busy times for inspectors.

But he said when the council was about to make a decision on the matter two months ago, circumstances, which Davis declined to define, derailed the discussions.

Schell hoped that the next inspector would have a full time assistant because of the potential dangers inherent in improperly inspected buildings.

John Eakins leaves at tough time

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

Retiring Victoria-Haliburton M.P.P. John Eakins says although contentious issues involving schools, sawmills and health care make it seem like a bad time to be leaving politics, he thinks it is an exciting time for someone new to step in.

"A lot of good things are happening here," he says.

Eakins announced his retirement last week. In an interview he told the Echo, "I indicated to (the party) that I wouldn't be a part in the nomination process."

Current moves toward county restructuring give greater consideration to rural needs, Eakins says. "It is one of a number of things that have happened to reverse people's concerns."

With regards to health care concerns, Eakins sees the Steering Committee on Health Care as an example of provincial interest in Haliburton's problems. The committee, formed this past December, is a joint venture by the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Community and Social Services. Minister of Health Elinor Caplan's decision to undertake this study was not popular locally, as it was a new stipulation added to again delay the ministry's four-year-old commitment to provide Haliburton with an 18-bed chronic care unit.

Responding to questions about his view of this decision and the consequent criticism, Eakins says, "I don't mind if the right decision is made in the end." When asked if he felt the ministry had reneged on the original commitment, Eakins responded that the situation was not explained well initially.

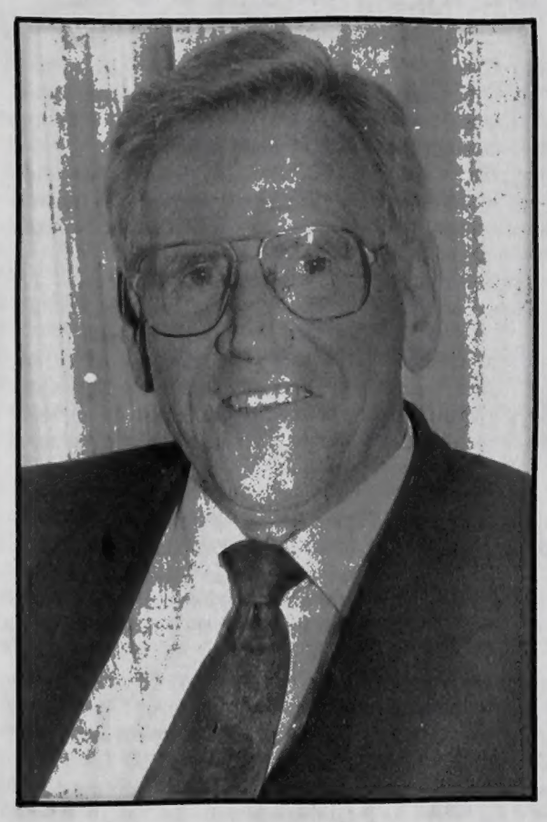
Eakins feels the health care review committee has been a good thing, but adds he felt it necessary to keep some distance between himself and the committee, since the representation of local people on the committee will serve the county's interests.

'The big picture is something we have to look at'

He says he has been made aware that various people are interested in seeking the nomination.

Recent disputes between the various levels of government concerning health care, lack of accommodation in the schools, and the closure of Martin's Lumber are part of a general trend, says Eakins. "I think it is part of a transition we're going through...

"In a lot of ways, rural Ontario doesn't receive the attention it deserves." But he feels this is changing, and a new representative will be part of the correction process.



'There hasn't been enough done in the past to include people here in decision-making,' says MPP Eakins

"There hasn't been enough done in the past in including people here in decisions."

With respect to the Minister of Natural Resources' decision not to transfer crown timber rights to a buyer of Martin Lumber, thereby effectively closing the mill, Eakins says, "I have said very clearly I don't agree with the Minister's decision on this." Although he would not be specific about details, Eakins says, "I'm still debating the issue with (McLeod)...It's not over."

And conflicts between Haliburton's Board of Education and the Ministry of Education are not entirely the ministry's fault, Eakins says. In a recent visit to the area, Eakins says Education Minister Sean Conway made it clear he wanted to do something to help with the accommodation crunch. But the board said its priorities — whether to expand on existing facilities or build new ones — had not been decided.

The ministry is anxious to review the situation with the board, but is awaiting the decision, Eakins says. Referring to complaints in the press about the ministry's lack of action, Eakins asks, "Why should the ministry and ourselves (Eakins' office) take the heat for this when we haven't been told what the priority is yet?"

Eakins also touched on the county's recent English only declaration.

"I see the question of understanding as a much larger one," Eakins says. "I think there has to be a better way of making people aware of who we are."

Saying he thinks Haliburton is on the verge of great things, Eakins adds, "I think we have to think about our future more...The big picture is something we have to look at."

Job kept MPP busy

the day is a long one at any age. Typical working hours are from 7 a.m. to midnight, he says.

Yet he still has a lot of feeling for Haliburton County—which constitutes about 90 per cent of his workload, his assistant Richard Steutz says.

"My interest will continue. If there's anything I can do to help Haliburton County, I will," he says, adding he would be happy to serve as a volunteer. But he will not seek any elected positions, municipal or otherwise. "I don't like people who retire and return."

Eakins considers the twinning of Lindsay with a Japanese city to be among his greatest achievements. As well, he takes pride in his initiative which resulted in changes to the Municipality of Toronto Act. New legislation made municipal councillors accountable for the moneys spent on election campaigns.

Serving in Cabinet and helping effect legislation was in itself a rewarding experience, he says. His press release states, "For this opportunity I shall always be grateful to Premier David Peterson, a friend and a colleague, whose leadership I greatly respect and admire."

Although he has "enjoyed the whole process," Eakins says he will not miss "the feeling that you have to attend every social event." Such expectations are draining, he says, adding he feels a M.P.P's first responsibility is to represent constituent's concerns in Queen's Park. "I think it's important to keep in touch with constituents but...If you're just going to be a social secretary, I don't want to be the member."

In the press release, Eakins says, "I want to thank the citizens of Victoria-Haliburton for allowing me the high honour to be their representative at Queen's Park. I believe that this is the appropriate time for renewal and to provide others the opportunity to offer new leadership and direction."

Costs shift again to Dysart

by LEN PIZZEY
Publisher

A provincial government plan to create a crown corporation to administer property assessment has Dysart council worried about higher costs to municipalities. Presently, assessment is carried out by employees of Ontario's Ministry of Revenue, who work out of an office in Lindsay, and the service is free to municipalities. But under a crown corporation, municipalities might be charged each time an assessor visits.

"Does this mean we're going to have some of the costs of assessment turned back to the municipality?" councillor Murray Fearrey wondered. "I think that's the way they're headed."

Reeve Bill Davis said the revenue ministry's plan appears to be another example of the government's policy of transferring responsibilities — and costs — back to municipalities.

Under the present system, provincial assessors drive up from Lindsay to evaluate new and renovated buildings, which are then added to the municipal tax base. But because the assessors are not permitted to stay overnight, travel time reduces their efficiency. Local municipalities have been concerned for many years that assessors are not keeping up with new development.

Dysart chief building inspector Dick Schell has submitted 51 completed building projects for assessment, representing a portion of 1988 and 1989 building projects in the municipality, but clerk Donna McCallum said to date, only five assessments have been completed and sent back to Dysart. It is a very, very major problems for us",

Bush fire strikes in Cavendish

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

A small forest fire in Cavendish Township near Salmon Lake was put out on June 13, four days after a tree was struck by lightning, says the senior fire technician at the Haliburton Fire Centre.

Dave Brown says the fire wasn't reported until June 12 at 3 p.m., after a Highway 507 driver saw the smoke. A helicopter with a three-man crew was immediately dispatched from Pembroke District. They put the fire out and were picked up the following day around noon.

The total area burned was about 2.4 acres. "In general, this was an easy one," Brown says.

Burning in an area only accessible by air, the fire might not have been noticed right away. The tree was probably struck during the storm on June 9. Brown says a tree that is hit does not itself start burning. Instead the electricity goes through the tree and into the ground. Since storms are normally accompanied by rain, the fire smoulders below the surface for days until the upper ground has dried out and begins burning.

Because the area had had lots of rain, Brown says the fire was not burning very deeply. "This makes the mop-up portion of putting the fire out much easier," he adds. The visible flames are relatively easy to put out; the underground smouldering is the difficult part. Fire fighters use power pumps to stop the latter. "You can literally chew up the ground."

In larger fires, infrared devices are used to detect remaining "hot" areas. But in a fire as small as this one, fire fighters can smell any smouldering areas.

Tax base low

the clerk told council.

"Our tax base is not increasing the way it should be, and that's because we're not getting the assessors here" said Councillor Fearrey.

Council agreed to a resolution expressing concern over the crown corporation proposal, and will ask a representative from the Lindsay assessment office to attend the next council meeting to discuss assessment issues.

RAISING AWARENESS: Kelly Reynolds, Beatrice Hartshorn, Heidi Nicholson and Adam Nicholson wait for the walk signal at Highland and Maple Streets in Haliburton. Being disabled means not only obeying traffic signs, but also noting the height of the curbs before you attempt to cross.

Doors to stores are open; getting in another matter

by LORRAYNE ANTHONY
Staff Reporter

Haliburton Village is not easily accessible to the disabled, elderly or parents with strollers, three young Haliburton women have discovered.

On June 14, Beatrice Hartshorn, Kelly Reynolds and Heidi Nicholson tried to enter some of the businesses along Highland Street, but they found it more difficult than usual. For once in their lives, they couldn't simply walk through the doors.

Beatrice was in a wheelchair, Kelly was on crutches and Heidi had her son, Adam, in a stroller. From their new vantage point, they saw the village in another light.

"We have quite a few disabled and elderly, and they should be able to get around easier," Heidi says.

National Access Awarness Week—Integrating Persons with Disabilities started on June 10 and runs until the 16th. As part of the event, Beatrice decided to wheel through the village to illustrate the problems disabled people face.

"I feel so frustrated. It is so hard for some people to get around. Hardly anyone helps them," said Beatrice as she looked down at her red hands, sore from trying to manouver the wheelchair.

Crossing the street, something most of us take for granted, was a problem for Beatrice because of the curbs. She had to approach each curb backwards to get on the sidewalk. She wasn't able to get in the CIBC bank, even though a concerned man tried to help her. Kelly was able to get up the stairs of the bank on crutches, but getting the door open was a difficult task. Heidi could only get into the bank if she lifted the stroller with little Adam in it. Her situation would have been worse if she had shopping bags in addition to her son.

The IGA store had a ramp, so the women thought they would be able to enter. Heidi and her son had little trouble, but after Beatrice in her wheelchair and Kelly on crutches got up the ramp, they had trouble getting the door open by themselves.

It was heart-wrenching watching the three women trying to get around town. Dodging pedestrians and bicycles on the sidewalk, especially when you haven't mastered control of your wheelchair, is a difficult task. Doors to many of the businesses remained closed to these women.

"Perino's is the only pizza place in Haliburton, and I can't get down these stairs," says Beatrice. General Lee's also has pizza, but its double doors don't allow easy access either.

The three women tried to raise awarness among the Haliburton business community with the hope that businesses will respond by recognizing the access needs of the disabled, the elderly and parents with children in strollers.

"I hope the community will notice what we've done and try to make their businesses accessible," says Beatrice.

They agreed that boycotting certain businesses would not work, since sometimes "it may be the only place to go". They also fear that the community will not take them seriously.

"We did this to make a point, but unfortunately most of the people who saw us just thought we were being cute," said Beatrice.

Recognizing the problem is everywhere, Minden supports anti-violence parade

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

They might not be joining the march, but Minden councillors want to support those who want to "Take Back the Night."

On September 15, a group of primarily local women is planning to parade through Minden as part of a national campaign to end violence against women and children.

Minden doesn't have a parade permit which must be attained, but organizers Beth Zwecher and Annegrath Gerrard want council's support of their plan.

"We don't want to 'take over' your town and not have you involved in the decision," Zwecher said in their council presentation last Thursday.

One million Canadian women are abused by their partners each year. No one needs to be reminded of December 6's Montreal Massacre, when 14 women were murdered by an "anti-feminist" assasin.

Yet most of the violence doesn't reach the news. Abuse towards women can also be a man pinching a woman's bottom or whistling at her on the street. Every act adds to the "desensitization" of our attitude toward violence.

"We need to educate the public and show solidarity," said Zwecher, who ended her presentation by reading the end of Sally Ritchie's column in last week's Echo. "Violence is not acceptable here or anywhere else... Once violence starts, it doesn't stop by itself."

Deputy-reeve Bern Berry asked if busloads would be brought up from the city. Zwecher said the marchers will just be locals, and they are expecting 50 to 100 people. Some will carry placards and candles, and there will probably be singing.

"Men also have problems with women (beating them)," Berry added.

This will not be a march "against" men, Zwecher said, "but we know the number of incidences of violence is much higher against women."

"It's very good that your group cares and expresses your care," Councillor Lewis Stevens. "A lot of councillors will want to be there on the sidelines. The very best of luck."

"We have to get back to either the Bible or spare the rod," said Reeve Ray Moore. "It's terrible the way young people have disrespect for adults. It's important children understand who's boss."

When Zwecher said "you don't solve violence with violence," Moore replied that when he was raising his eight children, it was better to discipline them when they're three. "then you don't have to have it when they're 13 or 14. I'm very pleased with the Bible telling me to spare the rod and spoil the child.

"I'm sure we'll support you."

The Canadian way

Perhaps it is a measure of the times in which we live. An idea is conceived in the minds of a small group of people, and, nurtured by the energy of volunteers, it thrives. For a time the enthusiasm is self-sustaining. The initial volunteers move on to other projects, and new people take their place. But soon the demands of time and the urge for permanence suggest alternatives. When an organization grows, its volunteers grow weary. The solution is to start paying people to do things that once they were willing to do for free. The prospect is especially enticing if funds to pay the volunteers can be wheedled from government departments. And thus begins the process of bureaucratization that has become a defining characteristic of Canadian society.

Once begun, the process of building bureaucracies is difficult to control. There is little incentive to rationalize or cut back. In fact, since power and influence at all levels of government are measured by the size of budgets, the incentive is to find new ways to spend, new ways to expand.

There are examples of bureaucratization in just about every Canadian community, but for a local example of the phenomenon, one need look no farther than the Drag River municipal building in Haliburton, home of Haliburton County Home Support Services. When it began 10 years ago, Home Support was a volunteer organization with a mandate to make life a little better for area senior citizens in genuine need. It still uses volunteers, but it now has a four person staff whose combined wages total almost $84,000, and it consumes almost $200,000 a year of taxpayers' money, more than $145,000 of that on administration.

A cynic disillusioned with government spending and soaring taxes might be inclined to wonder how anyone managed to survive in Haliburton County in the 120 years between the initial wave of settlement and the creation of Home Support, but to be fair, the organization does provide useful services. Meals on Wheels are particularly important to elderly people who might not otherwise get the nourishment they need. But these days a senior is anyone over 55, and the emphasis is less on self-sufficiency than on finding new ways to spend the working public's money.

An examination of Home Support's budget would give any business person pause. Is it reasonable to spend 75 percent of a fifth of million dollars on administration, when the administration is not the primary deliverer of services? Is it reasonable to provide staff with salary increases of 17 percent and 24 percent in a single year? (Small business owners shudder at such numbers, because they are so far out of line with the competitive marketplace.)

And then there is the question of conferences. Last year, Home Support spent more than $9,000 on conferences its paid staff attended. These included such questionable educational experiences as Assertiveness Training for the executive director and another on the One Minute Manager. This kind of spending is out of all proportion with the size of the budget. Many other social service agencies in the community aren't permitted to spend even a small fraction of this amount, and no local business would either.

Recently, Home Support has indicated that the Drag River municipal building is no longer adequate for its needs. It has been suggested that something in the order of 6,000 square feet of new space would do quite nicely. Who would pay for it? Taxpayers, of course — working people, small businesses — people already withering under the assault of government profligacy.

Perhaps we can never regain the spirit of volunteerism, sharing and individual responsibility that were the proud legacy of an earlier generation — the very people that Home Support was created to serve. Perhaps we can never revive the independence of spirit that is the antithesis of government handouts. But we should at least remain vigilant to waste in the public sector, and we should never cease to demand that the fundamental rules of good business apply to the bureaucracies we fund.

'Snobbish' group responds

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

Recently your paper printed a letter commenting on the small "snobbish" group who are members of the South Lake Association of Cottagers and Residents (SLACAR).

He is right, of course.

South Lake near Minden is an attractive lake about twice the size of Head Lake in Haliburton with a mere 100 or so snobs who are property owners. As a virtual suburb of Minden we have an interesting mix of permanent residents, some prominent members of the Haliburton County business community and cottagers. More than 90 percent of this diverse group are members of the lake association.

Snobbishness is rampant however, as is evidenced by the trimmed lawns, well tended gardens and attractive homes to be found all around the lake. We have snobs who spend their time in conjunction with the Ministry of Natural Resources testing the water twice weekly in their larger effort to preserve the quality of water in our lakes. Others organize a fishing derby for the kids. Some of the members of SLACAR are so snobbish they spend a Saturday morning on a clean up Pitch-In project launched by Snowdon Township to remove litter from the lakeside roads. More than 30 snobbish volunteers tramped the roads last summer with their garbage bags picking up bottles and cans and debris, and will repeat the effort this year. Apparently, they would rather be a snob than a slob.

Thanks to another group of snobs (primarily year round residents) we have an effective 'Neighborhood Watch' program which has increased security on the lake.

Perhaps the year-round SLACAR Newsletter along with frequent communication with local newspapers and membership meetings has contributed to a well informed, activist membership.

Yes, SLACAR objected strenuously to the establishment of a vehicle dump on the shores of South Lake — not just near the lake but directly on the shoreline. Snowdon Council freely admits they violated their own zoning provisions on South Lake Rd. A new Property Standards by-law was passed by Council to correct the matter but months have become years without a satisfactory resolution of the problem.

The beautiful lakes of Haliburton County are our most valued natural resource. While quite unique they are really fragile and deserve continued snobbish care.

A tip of the hat to SLACAR for such good work and especially for responding so well to the civic pride of its members.

Kenneth Brown,
South Lake.

Bear baiting story sickens subscriber

To the Editor:

I do hope I am not going to regret renewing my subscription to your very fine paper, as I do enjoy the articles, stories of the past and present, as well as County Life. However the article written under the heading sports, describing bear baiting, was to me sickening to say the least. How brave — to encourage the hungry animal repeatedly to the same feeding place then climb safely into a tree and kill the animal while it eats.

We have pretty well destroyed their natural habitat, so naturally they do have to go elsewhere for food.

Our own garbage, of which there is plenty, encourages these animals.

Why an American hunter? I guess they have bravely, finished off their, wild animals.

I wonder what our wildlife writer and historian R.D. Lawrence thinks of this type of game.

R.I. McGill,
Port Perry.

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS I have spoken on the subject of community involvement. The community is where most of our day-to-day living is done and I think that we all have to agree that it is important to be involved in various aspects of community affairs. Many people get a great deal of satisfaction from being involved in local projects, others get a feeling of pride when they walk by something that they have helped to establish. The community is always in need of workers, whether they be involved in group projects or as individuals going out to better the lifestyle in the area. You must not forget that your community is only as good as you make it.

On the subject of the community, I sometimes wonder if what has been known as community spirit is anywhere to be found to-day. It seems to have left the community. At one time most people who live here were involved in one aspect or the other in events that seemed to shape our lives. What has happened to that goodwill that we used to show when someone was having a tough time of it and needed help? We always had time to help but to-day, in this fast-paced society in which we live, we hardly have time to speak to our neighbours. Just think of all the fun we had when everyone would head down to the lake in the winter time to clean off the snow for a skating rink or hockey ice surface. To-day we seemed to be too lazy to even pick up the shovel. At one time when someone lost their home due to a fire neighbors from all around would rally to the cause and bring along their hammers and saws and build them a new home. To-day most of us would sooner forget the construction part of the building and making a donation of money instead. It's much easier to do it this way. What we seem to be missing is the fun of getting out as a group and working on projects that would help the community in one way or the other. Let's being back that old community spirit and in the long run we will all feel better for it.

I paid a visit to the ball park in Haliburton on Friday morning and found municipal employees hard at work assembling a new back step and batter's cage. This is going to make a big improvement to the ball diamond and it's something that has been needed for some time now.

Some people are starting to wonder how long we are going to have to wait before a new bridge is constructed to replace the old one which was removed from its old location following the recent flood. It's the one near the bandshell at Head lake Park.

Just a little reminder that the summer season is with us once again. This is the time of the year that vacationers start to arrive in the Highlands of Haliburton. How they are treated when they are with us, and how well they are made welcome will depend largely on people like you and me. If our visitors are treated in a friendly manner they will enjoy their stay with us and will want to return again and again. It all boils down to this: we must deliver the service if we expect to get business back in return. Let's not forget that when you go on vacation you like to be treated as though you were still at home. This means that we have to go out of our way to be friendly when the visitors come our way this summer. We must remember that it doesn't cost a cent to smile or simply say hello.

One of the last remaining trees on the main street of Haliburton came down last week when Ontario Hydro decided that it was time to cut down the big tree on the lawn in from of Dawson's Insurance Brokers office next to the Bank of Montreal. This tree has been standing here for years and we all felt a little sad when we witnessed the big tree falling to the ground. At one time the main street of Haliburton was lined with trees but one by one they have been cut down until now there is hardly a tree left on the main thoroughfare.

I was reminded this week that now is the time for people to start thinking about the ever popular Heritage Walks which will be coming up in the near future. During the months of July and August you will have the opportunity to join Wednesday's Heritage Walks and to explore Haliburton's past. If you are interested in taking part in these walks just be at the Public Dock in Haliburton on Wednesdays at 10 a.m. (Rain day Thursday). There is no charge. This year a special walk will take place on Monday July 2 and the first regular walk will be on Wednesday, July 4th and they will continue right up until Labour Day. People will be dressed up at the various stops on the Monday, July 2nd walk.

This coming Friday will mark the last day of school in this term for most of the students of Haliburton County. They have all worked hard these past ten months but now is the time that they can go out and play in the sun for two whole months. We wish all these students a fun packed holiday free from any accidents.

POINTS OF VIEW

Will kids listen to radio?

AS SOMEONE WHO has worked in and around radio for 35 years or so, I have been fascinated to read about the formation of a children's radio network in the U.S. They say it will be designed to appeal to the under-12s and to stimulate their imaginations. I wonder if it will have any Canadian affiliates.

The Kids' Choice Broadcasting Network is taking advantage of satellite technology and it's ability to link stations inexpensively. Investors are raising $3 to $4 million to launch their 24-hour network, and hope to have 100 subscriber stations, including the top 20 American markets, by this time next year.

The group has an impressive list of personalities on its advisory board, including singers Judy Collins, Harry Belefonte and Pete Seeger, and actors (Mr.) Fred Rogers of TV fame, Marlo Thomas and Mike Farrell.

The network expects to have a staff of 10 people to play music, tell jokes and stories, preside over sing-alongs and present the news from their flagship station in Orlando, Florida. Each part of the day will be geared towards a different age group.

I'm not really clear as to the age when children become aware and interested in radio these days, but I would have to assume that they will be influenced by their older brothers and sisters or classmates and, as things now stand, will see it as basically a source of music.

On CJRT-FM, a Toronto station originally provided so that Ryerson broadcasting students could learn the trade, but now out on its own, jazz host Ted O'Reilly recently began a feature at 6:30 each weekday evening wherein he reads stories and plays music for children.

The fact that it involves such titles as 'The Ugly Duckling' and 'Bambi' suggests somewhere in the younger end of the age group, but that is probably where you have to grab the childrens' ears, so to speak...

Try and think of the first time you remember really listening to the radio, and I am sure what you remember hearing is pretty well linked to your age.

For those who became aware of radio since the mid-50s it will most likey be linked to a song you heard, and you probably can 'name that tune' and the artist or group who played it.

Because it was the early 50s that TV started stealing the programs and listeners and — more importantly — the advertisers away from radio.

The turning point probably came, believe it or not, when Procter and Gamble cancelled their hour-long block of 15-minute soap opera episodes in favor of buying daytime TV.

Even in those days, programs such as 'The Lone Ranger,' 'The Green Hornet' and 'The Shadow' that appealed to young teenagers were still on the air. The Lone Ranger, of course went back to 1933, and was part of my childhood.

"A fiery horse with the speed of light, a cloud of dust, and a hearty hi-ho Silver! The Lone Ranger!'

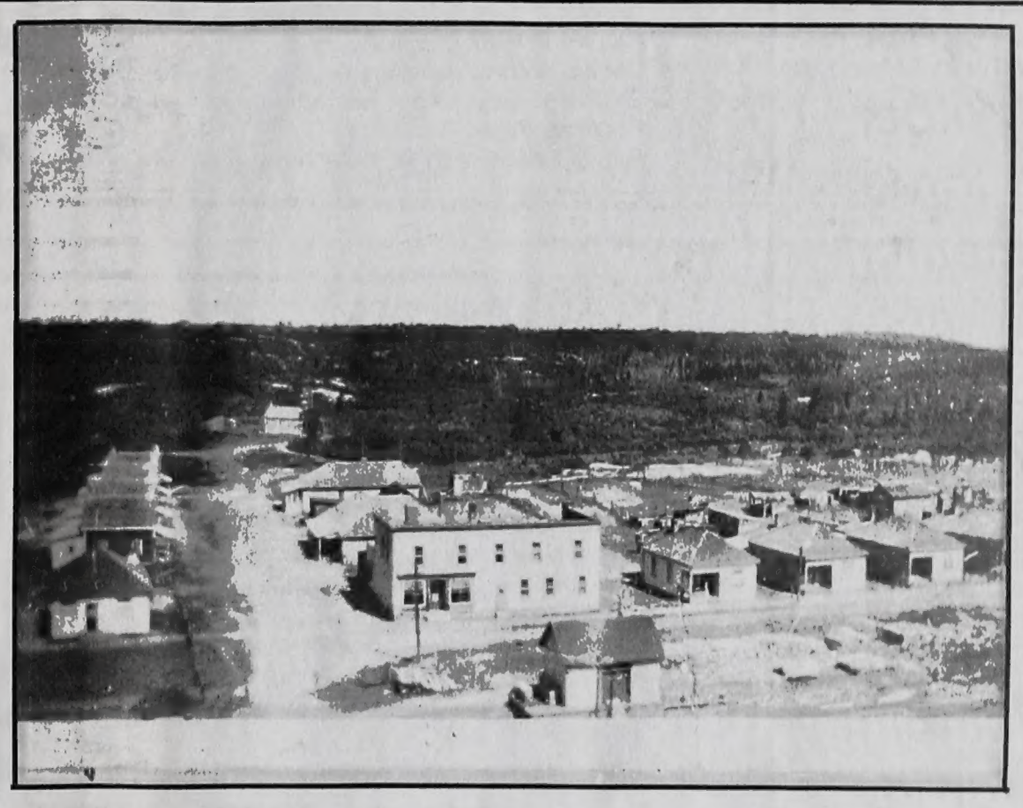
Those lines and the music of the William Tell Overture began every program, and people I worked with in radio into the 80's could still recite the intro's and formats from the shows they grew up with.

For younger children, 'Let's Pretend'on CBS radio, created by Nila Mack, ran from 1934 to the 50s on Saturday mornings, presenting dramatized radio versions of famous fairy tales and familiar children's stories — with child actors and actresses playing the parts.

Lassie began on the radio, and so did Our Miss Brooks, and Henry Aldrich, and many of the other early TV series. We learned to use our 'theatre of the mind' with shows like these, and the skills allowed us to later listen to hockey and baseball on the radio and understand what was going on from the descriptions.

I wish the new Children's Network all kinds of success. I'd like to think it would come to Canada, but the CBC would never accept anything so 'American,' and I don't think there are any private stations likely to take a chance on it. They want to know if children can or would learn radio's unique advantages over television in enough quantity to attract advertisers.

Meanwhile, those of us born early enough still have access to that magical 'theatre of the mind,' and personally I'm glad I'm one of them.



Pic of the Past

This week's photo will bring back memories for many present and former residents of the village of Donald. It was taken during the early 1940s. The large white building in the centre was the boarding house, which was owned by the Standard Chemical Co. It was destroyed by fire in 1951. The homes in the photo were also built by the company to house its employees. Behind the boarding house was the general store, which has been renovated into a private home and dairy bar. Next to the store was the community hall or 'opera house', which was torn down in the late 40s. The building in the distance is the school, which has also become a private home, owned by Irven and Myrtle Gethke, who submitted this most interesting photo.

I LEARNED A LOT at Earthfest on Saturday, but mostly I learned that I am a redneck! Now, I love the earth, don't throw garbage on the side of the road, recycle papers and glass. I shun the usual toxic chemicals for use around the house and buy "Green", even if my kids laugh and tell me it's mostly a scam. However, I think I learned that it is my basic attitude that is still pretty much in need of change.

Listen up: I was asked to bring my sailboat to Earthfest. Sailors are vain. Give 'em a chance to show off and they'll always show up. I'm no exception. So we dusted the winter off ole "orange Giuluis", rigged her in readiness, and awaited the day. The day was hot and still. We agreed to take her to the Festival anyway.

Haliburton makes idols out of "stink-pots", motor-boats that spew oil and slime all over the water that people used to drink. Bigger and bigger stink-pots show up every summer. Sail-boats quietly glide with the wind, against the wind, even into the wind, making use of the power of nature to get where you are going. See? Sailors are vain and above the crude intrusion of motors. See how I love the earth?

Given the heat and morning absence of wind and having to get under the bridge into Head Lake, we decided to paddle from home, rig her sails at the M.N.R. docks and sail gloriously toward the park. Sailors also like to show off!

The crew protested the plan. She wanted to sail to the bridge take the mast down, remast and sail gloriously... the crew is also a little vain. I finally made a deal: I would leave my bag of aerosol cans — bug sprays, sun-lotion etc — behind if she would paddle. The shock that I would even think of taking these to the Earthfest silenced the crew and we started paddling.

All went well except the crew kept getting us off course by banging and smacking at the big black flies which had joined us for the trip. Boat, sails, captain and crew were covered with them. They don't bite, but they harrass. I only mentioned my buy spray once.

When sails were raised at the M.N.R. docks and all equipment was secured, we pushed off, ready to sail gloriously, orange and white sails in full bloom, but there was no wind. "Becalmed" sailors call it. There are other words for it too. Ninety degrees of sun baking heat on fibre-glass, bugging flies and no wind. There were two other sail-boats bobbing in the water, each captain and crew gritting their teeth for a show and a race.

A friend of mine, a sailor, claims that if there are two sailboats on a lake, you have a race. Sailors are not only vain, like to show off, but also very competitive — in a sophisticated sort of way. The point of all this is to announce that while we were getting to Earthfest, Mother Earth obviously did not give a hoot!

We caught enough gentle breeze to make a few passes at the park, but not enough to cool us off or to shoo away the flies, so we beached "orange Guilius" by the canoes and took in the show.

Mother Earth was doing her bit of indifference there too. At first people looked like furry bears, or funny creatures with curly hair all over their bodies. But when they moved the hair seemed to jump off for a second and then regroup. Of course, it wasn't wooly hair at all, it was the flies! I saw two people greet one another with a big hug and it looked like they were flying apart as the flies let go for a few seconds and then rejoined their human transport.

I complained here and there about the flies. LaDonna said they had just prayed that it wouldn't rain. They forgot to mention flies. Good old Martha Perkins gave me the ecological explanation: "These flies lay eggs on tent caterpillars, which kills them, so they are environmentally friendly". Then Martha went off to her air-conditioned office to "write her column".

I finally found a display by the Eagle Lake women where they offered an Avon oil that keeps the flies off. It worked! But it was then that I discovered the sunburn! My legs, arms, nose and forehead were beet red. I had the farmer's suntan: red nose and white forehead where the hat stopped. On a bald head this is shameful.

All this time my crew is picking up materials, reading, examining and generally enjoying the displays. I'm sweating, burning and swatting. It lasted all day. The music and bands and dancing were great, I think it was dancing — or swatting. I even went into the art gallery to get out of the heat and away from the flies. Wendy's garbage was beautiful.

Late in the afternoon I called the crew and we took her handouts, papers and exciting ideas, leaded up the "Giuluis" and paddled all the way home with the shiny orange full covered in buzzing black flies. Tonight the crew, looking at my sun-burn and rubbing lotion on hers, said she feels like the farmer's wife: half white, half red forehead and arms.

Next time Change has an Earthfest, mother Earth should be notified of this honour we are bestowing on her. Something other than placed indifference to her children celebrating her birthday would be in order — at least a wind for some vanity, showing off a little competition. We are part of creation too, you know.

Oh well, everyone had a great time, except three captains of sailboats!

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

"I THINK he likes you." She and her friend sat on the edge of the dock, swinging their legs back and forth. They pretended not to notice the boy in the boat. He sped by in front of them, then turned sharply to make a big loop in the bay. She smiled and looked out of the corner of her eye. The boy was purposefully concentrating on the water. To see his expression, you would think it was the most normal thing in the world to make a dozen loops in front of someone's dock. "I definitely think he likes you," her friend repeated.

"He's O.K.," came Moira's reply. "Maybe I'll get to ride in his boat." This was her first summer on the lake and she was glad to have already made friends with the girl from the next cottage over. When her parents announced they had bought a cottage on Haliburton Lake, Moira nearly died. Why would they spend almost three thousand dollars on a place out in the middle of nowhere? And all her friends were back in the city. She wouldn't see them until the fall. For a thirteen year old, that was like being sentenced to a living death.

However, once she saw the lake and met the girl next door, Moira decided it wasn't going to be so bad after all. And it certainly was cooler than the sweltering city. She imagined her school mates running through their lawn sprinklers the way she had only the year before. Yes, having a cottage did have its advantages. Then there was the boy with the boat. That had possibilities as well.

While their daughter enjoyed swimming and meeting the other kids on the lake, her parents were having a somewhat rougher time adjusting to cottage life. Three thousand dollars in 1955 was a fair amount of money and they still wondered if they had made the right decision. True, they had escaped the heat of Toronto. But so far cottage life had been anything but a holiday. There were steps and docks to repair and stain, underbrush to clear, rocks to haul and grass to cut. Every other day they had to drive all the way into town for something they needed: nails, paint brushes, parts for the water pump. And the little cottage was like an oven! The first thing they would do next year was insulate it.

Then one evening they made a fire on the beach to catch the cooling breeze before retiring indoors. Moira was next door playing cards. They piled the dead branches onto the flames and roasted a few marshmallows like a couple of kids. The heat and frustrations of the day slipped easily away as they gazed into the fire and listened to the loons out on the lake. That's when they knew they had made the right decision.

"Lets offer to teach them to water ski." The two young men had been trying to get to know the pretty blondes for weeks with little success. Attempts at conversation down at the marina had been stiff and awkward. Neither fellow had much money and their fathers didn't like them borrowing the car to drive into town. So their boats were the main mode of transportation and recreation.

They had seen the females sunning themselves on the dock but needed a good excuse to get better acquainted. So they decided to enter the teaching profession right here and then. The young women loved it. They got to ski all they wanted for free and, as they admitted to each other, the guys were kind of cute.

It was five years since Moira's parents had bought their cottage and she had met lots of boys on the lake in that time. Now she particularly liked one of her new-found water ski instructors: the redheaded one.

Her parents thanked their lucky stars for buying the cottage. In five years they had put on an addition, added a boathouse and built a large deck. Moira had made good friends with young people her own age and the whole family returned to the city in the fall tanned, refreshed and rejuvenated. Several friends in Toronto had ended up buying cottages on the same lake. A real summer community was

THE OTHER MORNING, I finally did the thing I've been dreading all these nine years at Tonarosa Farms. I locked myself in a chicken coop. When the door closed behind me, the hook fell into the loop.

See, I have this little problem with claustrophobia. I'm not as bad as I used to be, but I still panic in a tightly packed, rickety old elevator, or warm, small rooms with no windows. And the thought of being stuck in a chicken coop for any extended period of time wasn't all that appealing either.

Fortunately, it was the large coop I was trapped in, and with some difficulty, I was able to open an unused door at the front of the barn. But not until I had done a little serious kicking at the other one.

Of course, the whole barn full of hens were in an unholy uproar by that time. One hundred chickens cackling alarms and flying around in fright. When I got the thick front door opened, there was no handle on the outside to pull it shut. Consequently, my next chore, once I got the offending lock opened, was to round up all the hens that had followed me out.

The small coop would have been another story, probably of the Alfred Hitchcock 'BIRDS' variety. The door between the coops is barred shut, from the other side. The windows have been protected from coons with heavy-duty grating, and the exit into the running pen was designed for fowl much smaller than me. Chickens like to peck at my feet. Now and then one will hop onto my shoulder when I walk past the perch. The coop is full of mosquitoes on warm summer mornings, and the hens do their best to get the ones that land on me. It's not a nice picture. Especially when I know that the racket those hens made the other morning echoes through the hills, but nobody ever heard me banging on the doors.

Athletic prowess is shown in Wilberforce

The Wilberforce Elementary School Track and Field Day was a huge success. Everyone participated and everyone went home a winner. Ribbons were awarded 1st through 5th and the remaining competitors received participant ribbons.

Staff and students were pleased to see so many parents come out both as helpers and as observers.

Due to space restrictions, only the first three place winners can be printed. Nonetheless, congratulations are offered to all competitors.

Big turnout for Minor Softball

Last Wednesday's Minor Softball sported another impressive turn-out with over 230 participants.

In the Bantam league, the Blue Team beat the Red Team with a score of 18 to 8.

In Peewee, the Dawsons were leading 6 to 5. But the Kinsmen took the game after all, with an impressive final inning effort.

Rexford-Grace beat out Curry Motors in the Atoms league. The score of that game was 27 to 6. And four scorers in particular kept observers' eyes skyward. Andrew Baker, Ryan O'Neill, Jonathan Consack and Michael Morissette each smacked out a crowd-pleasing home run.

WHEN PAST IS PRESENT:

Leo and John Dobrzensky return to Czechoslovakia to face what decades of Communist rule has wraught on heritage

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

WHEN JOHN AND LEO DOBRZENSKY saw the border patrol guards dressed in Russian army garb, the image seemed frozen in the past. Forty-two years ago, in fear of their lives, they were smuggled out of Czechoslovakia hidden in the back of a truck. Now they were returning at the request of a new government committed to political and social reform.

Upon seeing the Russian-style uniform, however, they had to ask: Have times really changed?

"It gives you a creepy feeling," says Mrs. Dobrzensky, relaxing in the top-floor den of their pioneer home which provided the inspiration for her local history book, Fragments of a Dream. Outside, the rolling hills, green canopy of trees and music of the birds make one think only of freedom.

But on May 12, as the Dobrzenskys embarked on a trip they once never dreamed possible, memories of totalitarianism and fear went hand-in-hand with blissful recollections of youth.

Their fellow passengers, representatives from Czechoslovakia's Ministry of External Affairs, reassured them that the upheaval of the last few months had indeed brought about real changes. Crossing into Czechoslovakia was no more difficult than crossing into the United States and there was no search of luggage, no suspicious glares, no echoes of the past.

Expatriate Czechoslovakians—one doesn't like to say Czechs with today's national unrest—who were driven away by the Communists are now being welcomed home. All minds, all skills, all dollars, are needed to rebuild the country. In four decades of Russian-dominated rule, the country has gone from a thriving agrarian nation to a stagnant, polluted and bankrupt Communist state.

From the Dobrzenskys, the Czechoslovakian government want knowledge of the past. Born into the aristocracy, both Dobrzenskys' lives are steeped in Czechoslovakian culture and history. Mr. Dobrzensky has written a book about his family's history—of which the government will print 25,000 copies, with proceeds being donated to the country—and Mrs. Dobrzensky's skill of communicating stories orally is well-known to participants in Haliburton's Heritage Walks.

Neither expected to return to his or her birthplace, nor did either want to. In an interview with The Echo last December, they said they had long since resigned themselves to their fate. "It's a sadness which has permeated our lives. No matter how hard you try, you will always be a stranger. We'll never be true Canadians and we'd never feel at home if we went back. You have to be the sacrifice for the second generation."

A chance to return

History, however, was being made quickly in Europe. In early 1990, the Czechoslovakian government invited them to return. The government would prefer permanent relocation, but "we've built up a life in Canada and you can't just throw that overboard."

Nonetheless, they were too intrigued not to go for at least a visit. On April 27 they left for Europe, first spending two weeks with relatives in Austria. A government car was then dispatched to bring them into Czechoslovakia.

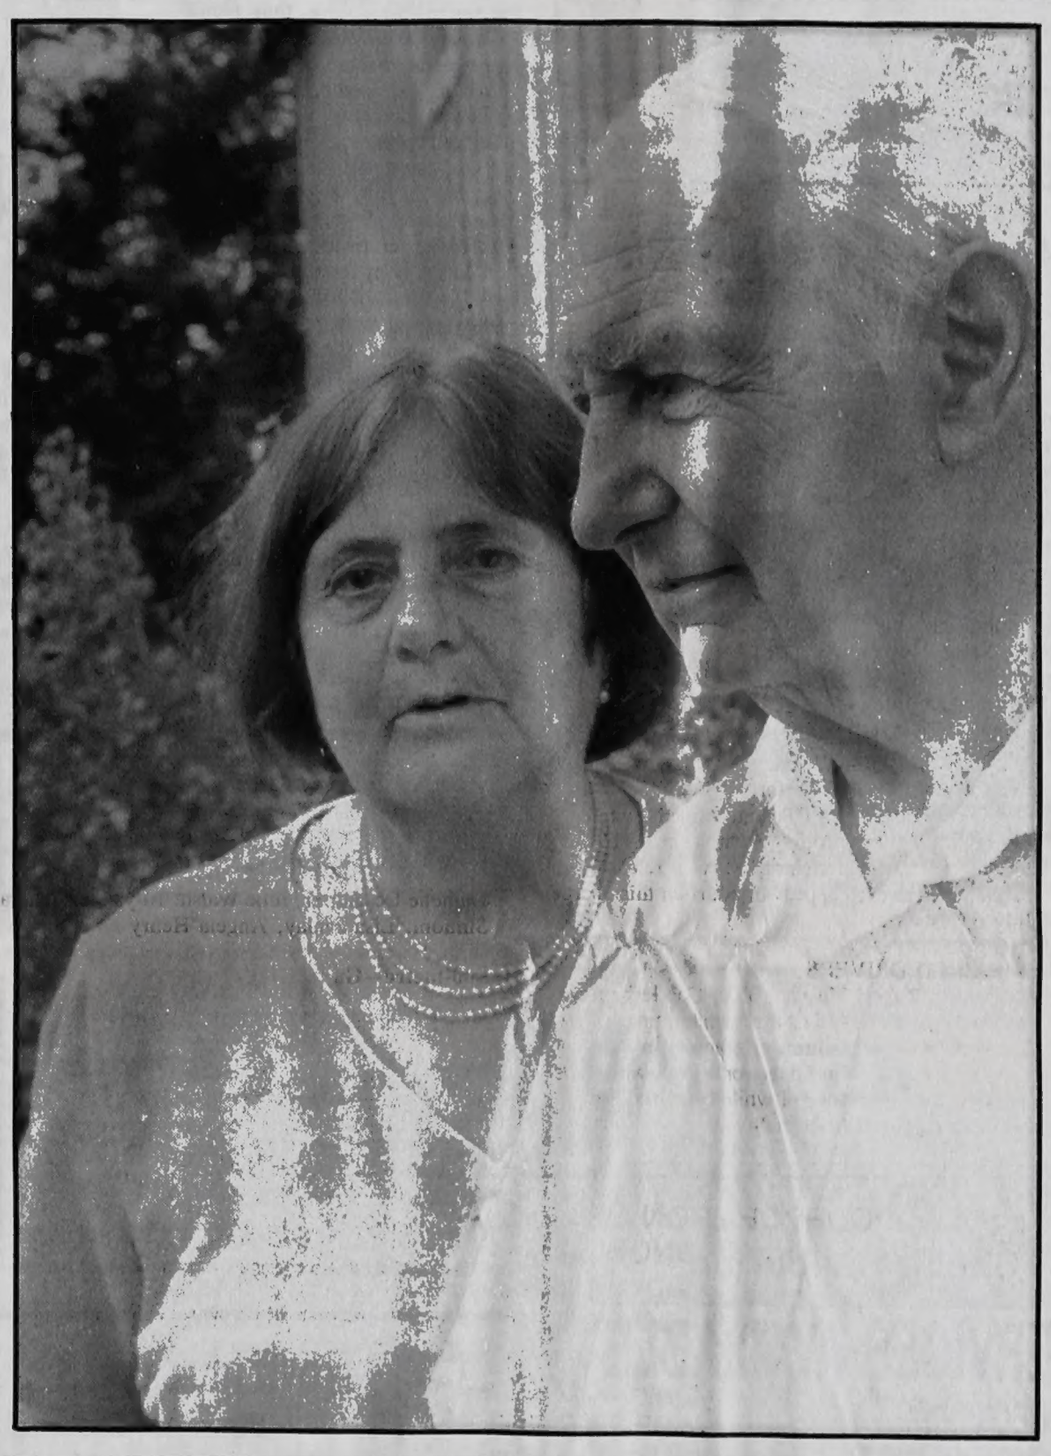
"When you are away for so many years, you imagine you will be entering a Third World country immediately," Mrs. Dobrzensky says of their impressions once they got past the border patrol. It wasn't that bad, but it wasn't as they had left it either. "The fields were in good order but there's a general feeling of, let's call it visual pollution as far as buildings are concerned. The government owns millions of buildings and they're not going to take care of all of them. In many instances, the stucco is falling off buildings and it gives a terrible feeling of neglect."

After World War II, one of the communists' first moves was to confiscate 65 per cent of the population's land and buildings. While the Dobrzenskys' loss seems dramatic—their property, place in society and history, culture and raison d'etre were taken away—they say rich and poor suffered equally.

"If you had a small barber shop, the government would have confiscated it and opened up a hairdressing centre," Mrs. Dobrzensky says. Their village later had one meat store for 10,000 people, and 50,000 people shared one gas station. Individual farms went by the wayside, replaced by agricultural co-operatives. "It's all very nice and all very big but it's not owned by the farmers. They were not allowed to live where they farmed."

Old farming practices were abandoned without appreciation for why those practices developed. For instance, in the Dobrzenskys' forest, they used to dig trenches to drain the soil of excess water. The Communists rejected that and the soil became so moist, strong winds knocked down the trees. (Now the trenches are being dug again.)

Few people could afford cars—a poorly-designed Skoda cost three times a yearly salary—so the roads are narrow and clogged with bicycles. Twice the Dobrzenskys had to pull over when their rented Skoda broke down. In an illustration of Czechoslovakian resourcefulness and generosity, however, both times passersby—one of whom was a priest!—fixed the car for them, dismissing all offers of payment.



"It's one thing taking something away from someone and another to let a beautiful heritage home go to pieces," says Leo Dobrzensky with her husband John.

Remembered with respect

"The people are the big plus," says Mrs. Dobrzensky. "I was struck by the wonderful family life which still seems to exist. They live very much the same as we do—both parents working—but it seems to be like Canada 20 years ago when there was a life calmer and quieter."

Only a handful of the people who once worked for the Dobrzenskys were still alive, but the stories of how things used to be were passed down through the generations.

"Their reaction was very positive, more positive than we expected. When we arrived where John was born, the children and grandchildren of the men and women who worked for him and his father were so nice. Their hospitality was unbelievable. You have no idea of the cakes and suppers we had to eat...

"We were told our family was so respected even the Communists would deal with us today."

Generosity included a couple giving up their bed so the Dobrzenskys could avoid the high foreign rate at hotels.

"We expected it to be a lot worse," says Mr. Dobrzensky of what was for him a very emotional homecoming. He was born in Chotebor, (pronounced something like Hotshubosh), educated there and brought his bride there to live. To be forced to give it all up was hard enough; to come back not knowing what would greet them was just as difficult.

Unfortunately, their visit home began on the wrong side of the house.

Postcards show a stately, yellow stucco home where generations of Dobrzenskys had been born since 1702. It's not a close enough view to see the peeling paint, the chipped stucco, the fall from grace. And only the Dobrzenskys can tell you how the fine-crafted indoor furnishings have been stripped away.

What was once the Dobrzenskys' living quarters is now a home for mentally retarded children, which has every depressing semblance of an institution. Their first steps in the house they shared as newlyweds brought home the full force of what had happened.

"When I saw it," recalls Mrs. Dobrzensky, "I was so mad I just turned around and said 'It's one thing taking something away from someone and another to let a beautiful heritage home go to pieces. You let things deteriorate and destroyed what was once so beautiful. I never want to see it again.'"

Angry, upset and hurt by what Communism had done, Mrs. Dobrzensky wouldn't listen initially to pleas to visit the other side of the home. She could take no more, she said. Please, please, it's different on the other side, they cajoled. She finally acquiesed.

And so it was different. Obviously there was still some respect for the past because half the home has been turned into a museum. The interior has not been plastered over and a sense of the house's grace has been retained.

Everything seemed much more welcoming after that initial shock.

"I only lived there for three years but when I saw the beautiful countryside, the hills, it was as if I had never left—it felt like home," Mrs. Dobrzensky says. And when they went to the church where crumbling statues guard the graves of her husband's family, "I heard all the people of the family who had prayed there for 300 years welcoming us. John was strangely quiet.

"When we came out of the church, the people of the village were there to greet us... Everyone said they suffered a lot and their parents suffered a lot under the old regime. This was a big loss for the country when the Communists overtook the government."

One person glad to see them was their former forester who, before the Communists took over, had lived in an old mill in the middle of the forest. "The Communists said conspirators could be there so they tore the mill down and he never got over it. He built a tiny house for tools, some bee hives and a bench where he would sit. He wanted to have something there."

More discoveries await

In their journey into the past, the one place the Dobrzenskys never stopped was the place where Mrs. Dobrzensky grew up, near Melnick. This was her husband's time for memories, and she's still not sure how she will react to the changes she finds at her former home. A highway now runs through their garden and an old school chum says that when she goes back to visit, "there's a black cloud all over the place." Environmentalism has not yet hit the heart of this industrial area and the pollution is horrible.

By concentrating on her husband, "I thought maybe this was a practical way of approaching (our return.)" The next trip will be her turn to have to face what Communism has wraught to her own cherished birthplace. It's not a picture she wants to see but one she can no longer push to the recesses of her mind.

But in the meantime, more changes are possible at her husband's home.

The present government is trying to decide what to do with another building on Mr. Dobrzensky's property. Some want it turned into a restaurant but "no one knows what will happen. Everything's in limbo. They're no longer allowed to dispose of what was once other people's."

Is restitution possible? The Dobrzenskys don't think so. "The government is bankrupt and 65 per cent of the people would be eligible for some sort of refund. They want us to return and work with them."

This invitation was reinforced after the Dobrzenskys gave their historical talk to 200 people. Mr. Dobrzensky's talk dealt with the family's history from the eighth century to the Middle Ages; Mrs. Dobrzensky took over from there and mentioned one of the main reasons the communists wanted to silence the Dobrzenskys 42 years ago. After England and France virtually abdicated defense of Czechoslovakia during Hitler's summit in Munich in 1938, Mr. Dobrzensky was one of the nobility who signed a declaration of loyalty to the president.

"There was a question period after our talk and an elderly man stood up and wanted the people present to sign a resolution that some of the information in our speech would be included in the school curriculum."

Their book has also been given a boost by a review in one of Czechoslovakia's literary reviews. An interview with them will be featured later.

Similarities and illusions

One question every Czechoslovakian wanted to ask was what Canada was like. Most were surprised to hear that in many respects, it's not much different than Czechoslovakia. (Contrary to popular belief, though, there isn't gold lying on the ground here.)

Here we're often debating how two cultures can coexist within a country's boundaries. In Czechoslovakia, some people are agitating for separation of the Czech and Slovak areas of the country. But most of the cheering for this idea is coming from the sidelines, the Dobrzenskys say. Slovaks who fled the country want to return to an independent homeland. However, in recent elections the Dobrzenskys say the separatists came in third.

"There's an over-riding feeling in Europe that there's only one thing that can deal with all these problems and that is a unified Europe. Once this is done (beginning in 1991), there will be less room for those nationalistic or separatist feelings."

If health and finances allow, the Dobrzenskys want to return once a year to contribute to the country's regrowth. Illiteracy has been stamped out, but children need help with their English. Mrs. Dobrzensky laughs when she remembers a story a young girl wrote for her English class. It was about Othello, who she said "distinguished himself by fighting pumpkins."

Pumpkins? "Then I realized that colloquially, a pumpkin is sometimes called a Turk."

To prevent such faux pas in the future, Mrs. Dobrzensky would like to offer a month-long English course next summer.

More than a few English lessons are needed to help the country learn to compete in a global market, however. "Since there was full employment under the Marxist regime, people became lazy—you were kept on a job no matter what you did. Some people became apathetic and lazy. Shoddy workmanship didn't matter."

Free enterprise must also be allowed to flourish. "There's no hunger despite the fact grocery stores are few and far between." Everyone grows their own vegetables which are prohibitively expensive in stores.

And tourists will have to find better accommodations, rental cars and facilities if interest in this once-

THIS WEEK

RALLYING TOGETHER: The hot sunshine made Ashley Fearrey, 5, and Bernice Shaw thirsty by the time they reached the cenotaph during Saturday's wheelchair rally. Sponsored by Extendicare, the walkers and riders raised more than $1,000 for Alzheimers research and the new DYMO wheelchair bus for not-so-sunny days.

$1,000 is raised with a push and a smile

It was a beautiful day to be doing something nice for other people, Hugh McKellar said as he walked down the main street of Haliburton on Saturday.

The 30 people pushing or sitting in the flotilla of wheelchairs behind him would agree. Getting outside on such a nice summer's day would have been a reward in itself, but when they could raise money for Alzheimers and the DYMO bus at the same time...Well, they would have walked to Minden if someone had suggested it.

Although she sometimes had a difficult time keeping pace with her walking companion, Barbara Fryer was a match for Mr. McKellar. Together they led the way in Extendicare's second wheelchair rally.

"This is the residents' contribution and it gives them something to look forward to," Mrs. Fryer says as they strike out from Extendicare, the sun shining, the mosquitoes at bay. Those who could, walked, and those who couldn't got a helping hand from a volunteering Extendicare staff member or visitor to the nursing home.

Coming down the Maple Street hill, headed in the direction of the main street, Alice Hartle wants her assistant to sit on her lap and away they'd go, flying down the hill the way Mrs. Hartle remembers from her youth.

Mabel Peace gets up and volunteers to push her volunteer. There's a shine in many of the residents' eyes as they enjoy the bright morning sunshine, fresh air and scenery.

"He's such a gentleman," Mrs. Fryer says as Mr. McKellar motions to switch places so he can be on the outside, closest to the street. Later, his companion Rita Lockhart has to keep a close eye on Mr. McKellar. "You stay with me because I don't want you to find a nice young girl and dump me."

The women in the group need to be pulled away from the attractive store windows. "That's where all her paycheque goes from Extendicare," they joke as they pass a clothing store.

Along the way, residents must drop by four checking stations where they recieve a drink and snack. Resting near the cenotaph, with the sights and sounds of Earthfest just behind them, staff member Rachel Fearrey says "If Marilyn Mighton knew we were up here with drinking boxes, she'd flip." (Ms. Mighton is an environmentally-friendly nurse at Extendicare.)

By the time residents and volunteers arrive back at Extendicare—the pushers more tired than the rest—they've helped to raise more than $1,000. Half the money will go toward Alzheimers research, the other will help pay for the DYMO wheelchair bus which takes them on longer excursions.

It was indeed a beautiful day.

Dobrzenskys want to help homeland

isolated country is to be tapped.

The Dobrzensky's son, John, is already helping bring about some of that change. He works for an investment company in France and has facilitated six big projects, including a dairy for making yogurt, an aircraft manufacturing plant and a school for managers.

"Each in his own way, we want to help rebuild the history." Will their son return to live in Czechoslovakia? "I don't think any of us right now could take such a decision," his mother says. Anyway, as a friend of theirs said, "in this global village, no one has to make final decisions like that."

Hope for a new president

It will take all of the country's energies and dedication to bring Czechoslovakia back to the standards once enjoyed. In this, the Dobrzenskys have faith that under the tutelage of playwright/president Vaclav Havel, anything is possible.

"Havel is just Number 1. He's a spiritual force and he's been so courageous and he's clean—so many people were turncoats. The country is proud to have a leader of such stature."

When asked if they feel bitterness about all they have lost, and whether they want to rage against the injustices which befell them, the Dobrzenskys borrow from Mr. Havel. "It's a chapter," he said, "in the history of the country that was so painful, a personal loss seems so insignificant."

"I didn't personalize this," Mrs. Dobrzensky adds to this sentiment. "I feel a collective bitterness about what these people have done to our Czech nation. It was a needless exercise in selfishness.

"One cannot forget the Russians were behind it and upholding the people at the helm. They destroyed the countryside, they poisoned the mind against religion.

"It's the loss of the country. Czechoslovakia has lost a cultural heritage. So much has deteriorated, so much has been stolen."

The Dobrzenskys' lives have been irrevocably changed by the Communists. Nothing will bring back those lost years, their lost heritage. Yet by helping Czechoslovakia wipe out all traces of the Communists' dark reign, they'll at least get a taste of sweet justice.

Environment the issue

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

With a three-dimensional, decorated model laid out in front of them, Stanhope council voiced its approval of a Kennisis River subdivision.

Lyle Storey and John Royce, partners in Hawk Valley Estate, want to create 40 lots near the Hawk lakes. Before they submit their plan of subdivision next month, however, they wanted to assure council the proposal would be an asset to the municipality.

"We're really protecting the environment," Storey, who is a Huntsville councillor, said last week as he showed council the model. The lots are all one acre or more and there will be rules governing construction: No trees can be cut within a certain distance from the river; only natural finishes—wood, stone, brick and not aluminum siding—are alllowed; two large spaces will be left open for common use; all hydro and telephone lines will be buried;

Ministry gives final nod for Lakeview school sale

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

Haliburton County's Director of Education is "delighted" that the Ministry of Education has approved the sale of the Lakeview School property and expects to solve the one "glitch" shortly.

"We've been negotiating the sale for the past few months. This represents one of the key pieces in restructuring the accommodation system for students," Stuart Baker says.

The board announced last Wednesday that the ministry had granted approval for sale of the site to Sir Sandford Fleming College, which has leased the former high school for several years. Each year for the next two years, the board will receive $200,000 which must be put into a Capital Reserve Fund.

However, a technical problem still exists. The ministry considers any space sold by a board to be surplus space. Money for funding to replace that space cannot be requested for ten years.

Baker says the ministry recognizes that the proximity of the Lakeview site to the highway is unsuitable for school children, although acceptable for adults. The building currently houses the Victoria Street School's kindergarten classes and SSFC offices, but will be used by the college for adult education.

Baker says the ministry has verbally agreed to waive the ten-year funding request stipulation. But to ensure the ministry does not renege on the agreement, the board is requesting the waiver in writing. Baker says a meeting between board members and Minister Sean Conway is expected within the next two weeks, and that he would be very disappointed if this request was not met. "I'm an optimist at this point."

In addition, Baker says he thinks there is more than a 50 per cent chance that the ministry will allow the sale of the Victoria Street School property, effectively providing the funding of a new school property. Ministry guidelines state that Capital Reserve Funding can only be used to provide accommodations.

Baker thinks this is an excellent guideline to have, and hopes that with funding from the sale of both the Lakeview and Victoria sites, a new school could be built. "It's a wait and see game, but the speed of the game has picked up by 50 per cent or more in the last year or so," Baker says.

Referring to frustration expressed by such groups as the Archie Stouffer School and Home Association, Baker says he understands people's concern about over-crowding in the elementary system. Nonetheless, he does not think it is wise for the board to go ahead with building until pursuing possible government funding. "I don't really think we should go ahead and say 'We'll pay for this on the backs of the taxpayers'...My position is that the province of Ontario should be brought to the understanding that they should arrange a sharing relationship with the taxpayer."

However, Baker says he would be willing to consider building without financial support from the province if no headway is made by the end of next year.

Baker praised Victoria-Haliburton M.P.P. John Eakins for his help over the past few months. He also thinks relations with the ministry have improved recently, especially after visits from Conway, and other ministry representative. "In the last three or four months, we've had more cooperation from the Ministry of Education than we did even a year ago."

Asked why this change had occurred, Baker replied, "I think it's easier to understand rural Ontario problems when you are looking at them than it is sitting behind a desk in Toronto."

Baby loons let loose

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

Lisa Malott is experiencing the empty-nest syndrome at the age of 22.

After being a mother for only four days, plus a 28 day incubation period, her "babies" have flown the coop.

Last Wednesday's Echo carried the story of the hatching of two loon eggs which Ms. Malott rescued from an abandoned nest. Although excited about her feathered 'children', she was unsure how to go about being a mother to the loons.

She decided, in the end, that she simply could not fill the role; the chicks needed to be with adult loons. So on Friday, with the help of a Ministry of Natural Resources staff person, Ms. Malott's chicks were re-introduced into the loon nest that sits in the marsh off the end of their property.

This was the second nest the loons had built; the first, ten feet away and abandoned for no apparent reason, was the original home for the two eggs. But there was a complication: the loons were nesting on recently-laid eggs in the new nest.

During the loons' momentary absence from the nest, the new eggs were gently set aside. The two chicks were put back in the nest, and a collective breath was held.

When the mother returned, something wonderful but unexpected occurred. "One chick climbed onto the mother's back, she got into the water, the other chick followed and off they sailed. We haven't seen them since," says Lisa's father Bruce Malott.

But what to do about these other two eggs? They had been put into the incubator for safe-keeping. Then their mother simply departed, children in tow, apparently forgetting about her second pair of eggs. Everyone was concerned whether she would return.

This time, Ms. Malott didn't want to go through the process of hatching the eggs herself.

For four days, she had played surrogate loon mother, and had grown attached to the first chicks. "They were so cute the way they followed her back and forth to the water, eating out of her hand," says her father. In addition to their $5-a-day minnow-eating habit, she had fulfilled as many of their needs as possible. With water basin and food supplies always on hand, she took them to work at Victoria Street School, keeping them just out of reach of curious but potentially dangerous kindergarten-size hands.

And then they were gone. "She felt so bad, she didn't want to go through it again," explains Mr. Malott.

So back to the nest went the eggs. All through Friday night, Mr. Malott sat with his binoculars, searching for the source of the loon-calls filling the air. To his surprise, the next morning, three adult loons appeared. One of them climbed onto the nest, made herself comfortable, and "She's been there ever since."

Who said there was no such thing as a happy ending?

The OMPP guarantees good benefits, no stalling.

The average personal injury suit arising from a car accident often takes several years to wind its way through the court system before settlement. That whole time, the injured person has to put a life back together using personal or family resources – and still might lose in court.

A new, comprehensive auto insurance system is being introduced. It's called the Ontario Motorist Protection Plan. Under the OMPP, income replacement cheques begin arriving within 10 days after the claim is filed. Within 30 days, money to cover medical bills and therapy will be sent. No matter who caused the accident.

The principle is: the sooner resources are available to help an accident victim, the earlier treatment and rehabilitation can begin. Studies show early rehabilitation is more humane and beneficial to the injured person.

The Ontario Insurance Commission is there to ensure that injured people are treated fairly, including providing services for solving disputes.

DO YOU KEEP THE RIGHT TO SUE?
Yes. While guaranteed accident benefits are there for everyone, if an accident results in death or serious permanent injury, you may still sue.

THE OMPP PUTS THE BRAKES ON INSURANCE RATES.
One of the major causes of the rising number of accidents, injuries and lawsuits in Ontario is the growing volume of traffic on the roads. But a closer look at the $1.8 billion paid out for bodily injury claims in 1988 shows that hundreds of millions of dollars never reached the victims. They went to pay the costs of the adversarial legal system.

Under the OMPP, that money is now used more effectively. It helps accident victims, without an expensive legal battle to assess "fault".

The new Plan will hold premium increases this year to only 8% on average in urban areas, while average rates in rural areas will not increase at all. Without a new system, you would have seen a premium increase in the 30-35% range.

DOES FAULT STILL COUNT?
Fault will continue to be used for rating purposes as well as determining liability for damage to vehicles. Bad drivers will pay higher premiums. Those convicted of drunk driving or other Criminal Code offences will not receive income replacement benefits.

The new Plan is more than insurance reform. Additional OPP will patrol the highways. Fines for traffic violations such as speeding have been more than doubled. Greater highway safety is a good way to control costs and reduce injuries.

More than ever, it makes no sense to take a chance while driving.

The Ontario Motorist Protection Plan makes a fundamental distinction between good drivers and bad drivers. It treats those involved in accidents with compassion, guaranteeing benefits and paying them quickly, regardless of fault. It steers car insurance in the right direction.

Your insurance company and your broker or agent have all the details. And you will receive an information brochure with your premium notice.

Stanhope keeps budget low despite plans to build office

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Because its new municipal office is expected to cost $325,000, Stanhope council wanted to keep other expenditures as low as possible, says Reeve Harry Davis.

"We worked out every budgetary item with a great deal of thought," he said in a telephone interview. "We never budget above our means."

Council believes it can pay for the new building without increasing taxes, though. It has $100,000 in reserves and plans to sell the existing municipal office and property, as well as properties along the Beech River.

"That takes the load of worry off the taxpayer."

In the General Government increase from $195,213 to $222,170, part of that is due to salary changes under new pay equity legislation. The municipality also has to pay the Employer Health Tax which replaces employees' payment of OHIP fees.

The firehall needs to be renovated to allow for a training room and lounge. This adds to the Protection to Persons and Property budget which will rise from $76,067 to $94,400.

"Because of the horrible subsidy arrangement (with the province), we get very little, if any, construction money," Davis says of the increase in transportation costs. Stanhope committed itself to paving one or two kilometres of road each year. "We'll stick to that, but the cost is our own."

The transportation budget will only be slightly about 1989's actual costs of $293,265 ($293,400.) Of that, local taxpayers contribute $141,900 and the Ministry of Transportation pays the rest.

A study is being done on the possibility of expanding the Hall's Lake Dump, which had been scheduled to close because it was full. This helps increase the environment budget from 1989 actual costs of $64,824 to an expected $68,500.

The township may recoup some of its recreation costs but regardless of that, Davis thinks spending more money on recreation and culture.

"It brings the community together," he says, "and they're two things we can provide for our ratepayers. We don't have a lot of utilities."

Fun Day, however, might cost the township $500 less, or $7,000. A $1,000 grant to the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association has been continued.

Instead of spending money on the seldom-visited information booth, the township has agreed to spend $3,500 to build a kiosk on the corner of Highways 35 and 118. Future operating costs will be paid by the Scenic Highway 35 Association.

And finally, council agreed to put $20,000 in reserve funds.

This keeps the township budget increase to 8.9 per cent. However, with increased county and education levies, the overall increase to ratepayers will be 11.9 per cent.

and in accordance with health unit rules, there will be two septic sites on each property.

"It adds to the long-term value of the property," Storey said of why they were being so strict. Since lots are expected to cost at least $40,000, he does not feel cheap houses will be built.

The subdivision is intended for year-round residential use and the road will be brought up to municipal standards. Lots will be sold in two phases.

"I like the way you're doing business," Deputy-reeve Ann Barker said. "You're coming to use and the public."

Several agencies of government, including the Ministries of Environment, Municipal Affairs and Natural Resources, must approve of the plan. There will be a public open house on June 27 at Little Hawk Resort from 2-4 and 7-9 p.m.

WORKING TO WIN: Haliburton Highlands Secondary School's Co-operative Education Program was a huge success. Awards were presented to outstanding students. Among them were, from left: Kelly Reynolds, Most Improved Studen; Beatrice Hartshorn, Most Hours; Dale English, Best Co-op Attendance; Val Bryant, Excellence in Co-op Education; Tanya Emmerson, Highest Marks; Noelle LaRue, Excellent Achievement in Co-op.

Free labour gives offenders chance to pay back society

by LORRAYNE ANTHONY
Staff Reprter

Everyone in the community pays when someone commits a crime. While the victim pays emotionally, monetarily and sometimes physically, we all pay in a less obvious way.

Each offence must go through the legal system. The public pays for the police and probation officers, judges and courtroom attendants. Offenders must be held accountable and give something back to the community.

Erin McCorkell's job is make sure that happens. As probation and parole officer with the Ministry of Correctional Services, she's there to help offenders pay their debt to society.

When a judge orders an offender to work a certain number of hours for community service, McCorkell and volunteer co-ordinator Ross Barnes find the appropriate community project. But McCorkell explains that it's not always an easy job.

"I have to convince a person that I have a someone who can work within their organization and I have to tell them that perhaps this someone isn't the most reliable or responsible person. It's hard to convince the community to use these people," says McCorkell.

The system works, but only if people in the community are willing to try it. Non-profit and community organizations receive free labour, but they have to put their trust on the line.

"They get jobs done that they might otherwise have a hard time filling, but they also have to deal with someone who might put them out," says McCorkell.

She remembers one client who did not work out. "He repeatedly did not show up, but I found another person and convinced the placement to give it another try." Many of the organizations want to do their bit for the community and help her clients.

Gerald Bain, Stanhope's clerk-administrator, is one of the people in the community who has taken advantage McCorkell's clients' need to work. He has never been disappointed.

"We've used a number of these people over the years and it has always worked out well. We've found the program very successful," he says.

To get in touch with McCorkell about lining up volunteers, please call 613-332-4040.

Sir Sandford hesitant about fundraising but says its other options are limited

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

The Board of Directors for Sandford Fleming College has made fledgling motions towards fundraising.

At last Wednesday's board meeting in Haliburton, the Director of Marketing and Operations introduced a discussion paper on the topic. Paul Halliday described it as "a proposal for a staged approach for Sir Sandford Fleming College to enter the fundraising arena."

Halliday emphasized that fundraising projects — such as Humber College's $1.8 million campaign — can be an enormous undertaking. This proposal merely "lays the foundation for more comprehensive fundraising later on," Halliday said, adding they intend to move forward slowly and prudently.

Three recommendations are included in the proposal. The first is to start an internal campaign for scholarships. Another is for "friendraising", a campaign to raise community awareness about the goals and needs of the college, and to encourage the involvement of community leaders in the college's future. The last recommendation is that a consultant be hired to advise the College about an external fundraising campaign.

Ontario colleges were not allowed to participate in fundraising until 1987. Limits for fundraising were established, based on a percentage of annual revenue.

In June of 1989, the Board of Governors agreed to explore the feasibility of a corporate fundraising efforts. They were cautious, however, and some members adamantly opposed being personally responsible for monetary requests. On several later occasions the board indicated support for scholarship or financial aid-related fundraising. In May of this year, governors discussed the subject with the President of Trent University, and renewed concerns arose. The paper is designed to address fears and suggest a cautious approach.

In discussing the paper, board member Ted Hill said that although he did not object to friendraising or scholarship campaigns, he was concerned that moneys received from corporate fundraising could mean a loss of other financial backing. "I'm afraid if we are successful, the government will look at that success and cut our support accordingly."

President Brian Desbiens responded, "I would not want to fundraise one cent towards our regular operations...That would be asking the public to pay twice." However, the money from donations will be used to support facilities such as gymnasiums, which Desbiens says the government has not supported for several decades.

Desbiens said he did not want the college to be dismissed as a potential educational choice simply because they lacked a gym. "If we don't do (fundraising) we'll be placing ourselves in a less competitive position."

The discussion paper states: "Insufficient increases in government funding make it more and more difficult to achieve our educational objectives...It is probable that we, along with all other Ontario colleges, will have to be in a permanent fundraising mode by the end of the decade."

Reader questions new teaching philosophy

To the Editor:

I read with great interest your feature articles on literacy, education and your school visits. (May 16.)

"Process writing" is quite an eyeopener. Not having children of my own in the school system any longer, I wondered why teachers do not correct my grandson's spelling mistakes. Now I found out. I just wonder about the philosophy of this new kind of teaching, where nothing should be made too difficult for children, not to "frustrate" them, making almost playtime out of classes. Is this practical?

For instance, not to teach spelling in the first place: is not the relearning or unlearning of once established ways and habits much harder later on? Is it advisable? In the future when the children step out from the protected life of schools into the real world, they have to stand on their own feet, often in stressful, frustrating situations, and next to those who have come from different cultures and education systems where learning is still considered "serious business" (literacy being on top of the list) that prepares young people for the demands that will be placed on them later on. Will our children be equal in knowledge and skill?

Not everybody needs to go to university. In the future we shall also need good tradespeople. In any apprenticeship program reading is an important and necessary requirement. And good books help us grow by stretching our minds and imagination. "Books and learning and curiosity lead you in so many directions you're never bored"; Michael Collins said it all, and I certainly hope he will be given the opportunity to share his sense of "wonder and curiosity" with the young people in the schools.

A good teacher does not "put down" a child or "get mad" when the pupil makes a mistake. By our mistakes we have learned only when we were corrected, and paid attention to the correction. One never has to be ashamed to make mistakes; humbled perhaps, but not ashamed. And humility is a virtue, so is the ability to pay attention. In acknowledging mistakes by paying attention to correction we will grow in that virtue. The deeper shame is not knowing at all, later on when it really counts. Today's high school students may have a notion already what that means. But it is never too late to want to learn, and to open our minds to the joy of learning for learning's sake—not just for the financial benefits by landing the big-money jobs.

In my growing up years we were told that nobody can ever take away from us what we have learned, even if everything else is lost by war or disaster.

Of course the more we learn the more we realize how little we know, and that part is what makes a learned person wise and humble.

Minden, mind your manners: Stanhope

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The following are matters discussed in brief at last Wednesday's Stanhope council meeting.

Postal Outlets

Since postal service "can't get any worse," council will not support a letter against retail post offices.

"The post office has become such a monster and inefficient and costly, (Canada Post) is doing this to reduce the cost," said Reeve Harry Davis. Postal service is now available at the Corner Store in Minden as well as the Post Office in the Hitch 'n Post in Carnarvon. Councillor Eleanor Harrison said this is convenient for people who are in Minden during office hours.

"Why didn't they extend the hours of the post office? They could have revamped the whole thing," said Deputy-reeve Ann Barker.

Oakview docks

Roger and Sharon Hewson, owners of Oakview Lodge on Little Hawk Lake, may lose one battle but they won another.

The Hewsons have been told to remove the 250' dock near their property. Council feels the docks are needed for water-access cottagers, but neighbour Sandra Wells would not give the Hewsons permission to have the docks in front of her cottage. Oakview docks have been there for several years so the Hewsons are arguing they have the right to keep them there.

"That's like renting a cottage for 20 years and then saying you have a right to own it," said Councillor Fred Gardner.

In the meantime, council would not agree to Wells' request to have the Hewsons' shed removed from the 66' road allowance. "I wouldn't want to see this council get into the Shermans and McCoys," said Deputy-reeve Ann Barker.

Minden request

The next time Minden wants Stanhope to help pay costs of the arena, it had better ask more politely.

In a long-standing debate, council was peeved by the way Minden demanded, rather than asked for, money for each Stanhope figure skater or hockey player who uses the arena. Stanhope, which doesn't have an arena, sees the contribution as a donation, especially since Dysart et al never seeks compensation for Stanhope users of the Dysart arena.

"It's not written up as 'Would you care to...,'" said Deputy-reeve Ann Barker. "It's a bill."

Councillor Eleanor Harrison, in approving the $700 donation, says the cheque should be sent with the accompanying message: "You'll get this donation this year but if you send us a bill next year, you might not get anything."

You have to ask nicely, council agreed.

EFFORTS AWARDED: Don Robinson, in the plaid vest, presents medals to winners of the county's Senior Games at a special last Thursday at the Haliburton Legion. Winners of the month-long games now will be competing against Muskoka with the hope of going to the provincial championships which will be in London.

Council considers recycling bins

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The following items were discussed in brief at last Thursday's Anson, Hindon and Minden council meeting.

Dump costs

Council has to pay more to remove recycled garbage from the dump than it receives from selling the newspapers, tins and glass containers.

Because of the glut of recycled materials, market prices are low. Council paid $125 to have recycled materials removed from the Scotch Line landfill site and received $75 when the materials were sold.

Meanwhile, Tina McKnight would like council to install recycling bins at the Ingoldsby dump. Council will consider it for 1991.

Postal outlets

Reporting on a speech by Maude Barlow at a conference, Deputy-reeve Bern Berry said council should be wary of plans to privatize postal service.

"If any company goes private and the government wants to bring it back (into the public sector), it must have permission from the United States because of free trade," he said.

Berry supported a letter speaking against Canada Post's new policy of opening retail postal outlets. The post office, he said, "is the meeting place. You'd be taking the style of your town if you take your post office out."

Fun Night's success applauded

To the Editor:

Victoria Street School's annual Fun Night is over for another year. Friday evening's activities were, once again, a huge success, as was evident in the smiling faces and sparkling eyes of the children who brought their parents, grandparents, sisters and brothers to their school for an evening of fun and games.

Proceeds from Fun Night are used to pay for school trips and other student activities. However, Fun Night is not primarily a fund-raising venture. It is an opportunity for families to enjoy an inexpensive and entertaining evening together at their children's school.

This unique event has become a time-honoured tradition. Fun Night is eagerly anticipated by the community's young children, and fondly remembered by those who have attended over the past 16 years.

We are grateful to the teachers and staff of Victoria Street School for your support and hard work. Thanks to many parents who volunteered your time—many hands are required to make things run smoothly! Thanks too, to the many local businesses who donated money for prizes. Fun night is truly a community effort, and a wonderful gift to our children.

'South Lake snobs' find reason for pride

MORE LETTERS FROM ECHO READERS...

The Echo from John Curran, "a resident of South Lake". Obviously Mr. Curran did not discuss the proposed rezoning of property for a new compound yard for wrecked vehicles with Mr. Gordon Lyddiatt, who is considering the proposal. If he had, he would not have made so many inaccurate statements. The issues he raised must be clarified and the erroneous facts corrected.

1. SLACAR has made no response in Snowdon Council regarding the proposed new compound yard at South Lake. The proposal has not yet been presented to council.

2. Brad Bradamore, planning consultant for Mr. Lyddiatt, requested time at a SLACAR executive meeting to review the proposal. naturally there were many concerns voiced. Mr. Bradamore asked for, and was given, time on the agenda at the SLACAR Annual General Meeting to be held on June 30. He will present the rezoning proposal to the membership. The issue will be discussed and the views of the majority will decide the position that SLACAR will take.

3. SLACAR does not represent "the narrow-minded views of a few members". Over 90 percent of the property owners on South Lake are members of SLACAR, including Mr. Lyddiatt. The decisions of the majority dictate SLACAR policies.

4. Are we "naive to think Mr. Lyddiatt would ruin the very waters which provide Silver Birches Resort with business?" Mr. Curran has apparently never noticed the current wrecked vehicle yard on the shores of South Lake at Silver Birches Resort. I am puzzled as to how he could be unaware of this eyesore. For the past three years SLACAR and many individual property owners have been asking Snowdon Council to uphold the By-laws and order the removal of this illegal impound yard. A vote at the 1988 SLACAR Annual General Meeting indicated, by a unanimous decision, that SLACAR become involved in this issue. The members demanded that this environmentally dangerous compound yard, which leaches, dangerous toxic fluids and vehicle deterioration into South Lake, be removed. Although Snowdon Council issued a cease and desist order on July 11, 1989, the yard still exists. Do we think that Mr. Lyddiatt is concerned about polluting the waters which provide his resort with business? No!

5. Mr. Curran has obviously never read a SLACAR Newsletter or attended a General Meeting, otherwise he would not have raised the feeble excuse of septic system pollution as a viable reason for rusting, leaking vehicles to continue leaching toxic fluids into our lake. SLACAR is very concerned about septic systems as evidenced by our repeated articles and presentations to our membership. At our 1989 Annual Meeting, John E. Ross, from the Ministry of Environment, was the guest speaker. He informed us of the "Cottage Pollution Control Program" and educated us on the regulations, use and maintenance of septic systems. Our Environmental Director has sent letters to the Ministry of Environment requesting that South Lake be placed higher on the list for lake assessment of septic systems. We are striving to "clean up our own backyards."

6. As to the question of motor boats and engine size, if Mr. Curran is a registered property owner he should become a member of SLACAR and raise this issue at the meeting. The topic has been discussed previously and is a concern. We need someone like Mr. Curran, with strong convictions on the matter, to take on this cause and help promote the use of smaller boats and engines on the lake. Perhaps Mr. Lyddiatt could initiate the process by limiting his campers, cottagers and permanent residents "to 10 hp or less," as Mr. Curran suggested.

7. As for the "damage done to the shoreline by their huge wakes," it is minimal compared to the destruction that has been done by the bulldozing of marshland and shoreline at Silver Birches. Our guest speaker on June 30 should be of great interest to Mr. Curran. A representative from M.A.P.L.E. will be giving a presentations on shoreline preservation.

8. Mr. Curran suggested that we should change our name to "SLOTHS, the South Lake Order of Totally Hypocritical Snobs." As 90 percent of the property owners on South Lake are members of SLACAR and are concerned enough about environmental issues to voice their concerns, then I guess that makes the majority of us "snobs." If stating your opinion and standing up for your beliefs makes one a "snob", then I, for one, am proud to be a "South Lake Snob".

It is a shame that Mr. Curran did not discuss his concerns with Mr. Lyddiatt or with SLACAR, as I feel that he has seriously jeopardized Mr. Lyddiatt's rezoning proposal. Instead of attacking SLACAR and listing other environmental issues as a legitimate excuse for allowing further pollution, Mr. Curran should have presented a strong case to back his endorsement of a wrecked vehicle compound at South Lake. All he accomplished with his letter to add more fuel to a great many already inflamed property owners.

Eleanor Lymer,
Secretary, SLACAR,
South Lake property owner

Term 'incurable' is questionned

To the Editor:

As a former chronic sufferer from ulcerative colitis I was intrigued by Sally Ritchie's compassionate article on bowel disease. The article does contain one inaccuracy, however, namely the statement that ulcerative colitis is incurable. One might quibble about the term "curable" but in my own case I have gone many years without any symptoms. I was diagnosed when I was a twenty-year-old student. For two years I was wracked by agonizing cramps fifteen or twenty times a day and suffered all the other embarrassing symptoms. My gastroenterologists suggested colostomy surgery but fortunately I refused. In 1962 I went to graduate school in the U.S. and within a week all my symptoms disappeared totally. I could only attribute my recovery to my complete change of environment and lifestyle.

In 1974 my symptoms recurred for two years while I was living in Spain and going through the throes of the dissolution of my first marriage. Knowing that my problems were psychogenic in origin (as are perhaps 90 percent of all "dis-ease", according to some medical authorities) I began a programme of psychotherapy and again made some radical changes in my life. The symptoms gradually disappeared and have never recurred.

One case proves little but nevertheless there is no disease known from which someone has not been cured. The scientific establishment, which is wedded to a nineteenth-century mechanistic view of the universe, claims that isolated remissions are unimportant aberrations, but it is crucial that patients have hope that they may be among the cured or the symptom-free. The newly developing field of psychoneuro-immunology has hundreds of well-documented cases of patients who use imagery to make radical changes in their condition. The mind does affect the body (something that so-called "primitive peoples" have known for millenia) and it is important that people not label themselves as "incurable" for they surely will be if they believe it.

Those interested in learning more about the power of belief might be interested in reading Love, Medicine and Miracles by Dr. Bernie Siegel of the Yale University Medical School or by Norman Cousins, the American writer who cured himself The Biology of Hope of another "incurable disease".

Kenneth Golby,
Tory Hill

Cottage romance comes full circle developing. Moira's father did have to keep an eye on some of the young men, however. One particular water skiier had been hanging around a great deal and he wasn't sure how reliable the fellow was once he took off in the boat with Moira. The redhead would bear watching, he told his wife.

It had been a hard day. The heat had finally come, after a cold and rainy spring that had started to get everyone down. But the weather had changed and the lake had been dotted with boats all day. Their kids had even been swimming that afternoon, though Moira shivered at the thought of the still-cold lake water. Now it was close to eleven o'clock and she was really enjoying the cool night air. Her husband had already gone to bed, exhausted from a day of moving rocks for their new stone patio. Moira poured herself a cool drink and sat on the porch overlooking the lake. Fire flies danced in the air like floating stars.

Down by the water, the kids had made a fire pit and built a small bonfire. Boulders and tree stumps served as seats and she had thrown them a bag of marshmallows when they headed out the door. A few of their friends had joined them, bringing a tape deck and cooler full of pop. They had all grown up together on the lake; snowmobiling in the winter and practically living in their boats in the summer. Now that they were working, weekends and holidays were especially precious. Moira remembered how it was when she was their age.

They weren't even aware she was up there on the porch. She hadn't turned on the light but instead sat watching the fire with them. Its flames illuminated their faces, making her own redheaded offspring look as though they were ablaze themselves. Moira couldn't help but feel happy that they enjoyed the same things about the lake she, her husband and her parents always had.

It's funny how things will come full circle, she thought, sniffing the woodsy smell now carried on the night air. She noticed on of the young men who had joined the others by the fire was sitting especially close to her daughter. "I wonder who he is," she thought. "I think I've seen him on the lake." She made a mental note to ask her daughter in the morning.

OVER TIME, ALL ENERGY-EFFICIENT HOMES SAVE YOU MONEY. BUT SOME WILL SAVE YOU AN EXTRA $2000 RIGHT NOW.

The Five Star Program is designed for electrically heated R 2000 homes in parts of Ontario where natural gas is not available. These homes are built to exacting standards to give you and your family the highest levels of energy-efficiency and comfort.

If you're shopping for a new home, it pays to be energy-conscious. That's why R 2000 homes built under the Five Star program make so much sense.

These homes consume just over half the energy of a conventional home. Over the years, you'll save thousands of dollars.

And now, to further encourage you to be energy-conscious, you can qualify for a $2,000 grant from Ontario Hydro.

In addition to the on-going energy savings, there are other benefits too.

Because these homes are so well insulated, you won't find any drafts or cold spots. They're also noticeably quieter inside. And with a continuously operating ventilation system, you'll always have excellent fresh air circulation.

Should you ever decide to sell your home, you can expect a better than average return on the market.

Your hydro can provide you with more information including the names of builders who are registered in the Five Star Program in your area.

If you're thinking of buying a new home, why not get the best home for your money? Look for an R 2000 home built under the Five Star Program. Get a head start on energy savings with a $2,000 grant now.

For details and a list of registered R 2000 builders near you, call Denis Allaire at Ontario Hydro's Minden Area Office at 286-2031

The Eagle Lake Women's actions display true spirit of Earthfest celebration

For people who can't be bothered with separating their garbage, Mrs. Still just shakes her head and says, "time grows short for all the things we take for granted. It's our world that is at stake, what else can I say?"

Other interesting things at the Eagle Lake Women's exhibit included cleansers you can find in your own kitchen. For example, they suggested a mixture of vinegar and baking soda to unclog drains (vineagar alone works just as well, since the baking soda neutralizes the acid in the vinegar). A mixture of vinegar and water cleans windows and Borax is a good carpet cleaner. All these cleaners are natural and won't hurt the environment the way many commercial cleansers could.

The Eagle Lake Women also suggested ways to pack lunches to cut down on garbage. Filling thermoses instead of using drinking boxes or cans of pop and using reusable lunch bags mean less gets tossed into the garbage can.

The true spirit of Earthfest was really felt at The Eagle Lake Women's display. The weekend just before the event, one of the members, Florence Dill, passed away. Although devastated, the rest of the members carried through with Earthfest.

"That's what Florence would have wanted," said Mrs. Still.

But environmentalists don't want to spend all their time in the kitchen. A big part of Earthfest was recreation, but the kind of recreation propelled by human energy. Elbow grease not gasoline was the order of the day.

Avid canoeists David Kennedy and Bob Davis explained how they can enjoy the environment without noise pollution or motorized boats.

"Canoeing doesn't impact on the environment in a negative way," said Mr. Kennedy, while nailing a thin strip of cedar to a skeleton frame.

Watching as his friend builds yet another canoe, Mr. Davis explains that wooden canoes are biodegradable and can be returned to the environment.

"After an accident a plastic canoe will be in the wilderness for ever. It will always be a big chunk of plastic," said Mr. Davis.

Craig MacDonald, a recreation specialist at the Frost Centre, was stationed at a winter camping exhibit. For most, the thought of a winter's night spent in a tent is more chilling than a Steven King novel. Not at all, Mr. McDonald reassured his skeptical audiences. Winter camping can be very challenging and even comfortable, as long as you have a wood stove in your tent. He said that winter camping allows you to get very close to the wilderness.

"If you're in a tent you can hear everything around you. That's something a cottage doesn't let you do," said Mr. MacDonald. With the freedom of movement a tent affords, "you can camp all across Canada".

RAPPING FOR THE EARTH: These youngsters displayed their rap singing talents during Saturday's Earthfest. Festivities attracted hundreds of people to Head Lake Park on a perfect summer day. And when everyone left that night, the park was just as clean as they found it—probably cleaner after this garbage-free event.

A PAPER BOAT: One of the most creative ways to recycle paper is to build a canoe out of it, and then take it for a ride on Head Lake, as Charles-Henri Lutz did Saturday during Earthfest competition.

Perhaps the most spectacular event was the boat race, emphasizing 'human energy'. The winning boat, "Hope" by Michael Butz, was a 13-and-a-half foot kayak made out of old newspapers, catalogues, junk mail, cardboard, plastic bags and scrap cloth. The vessel was held together by old paint (courtesy of the dump), staples and stringers (long thin pieces of wood). The total cost of the boat was $5.

Charles-Henri Lutz and Rosemary McKenzie came in second with "Canoe Mache". Their boat was made of newspapers and held together thanks to eight kilograms of flour and varnish string and scrap bits of wood. The total cost was $25 (the cost of the flour elevated the cost of the boat).

The "Rednose II", by Wally Butz, otherwise known as salvaged dock floats with scrap lumber, came in third place but cost nothing to make. Honourable mention goes to: Bruce and Eva Griffith for "The Ozonk"; Susan, Celeste and Cedric Butz for "Rubber Duckie"; and Sid Brinkman and Ed Muenzel for "Innertubes".

Although propelled only by human energy, the lake was not silent as the boats raced against one another. From the government dock, spectators' cheers and shouts of loyalty could be heard across Head Lake.

Also heard, but perhaps only in people's hearts, were three cheers for the organizers of the event.

What budded from a simple conversation between some of the members of CHANGE in Wendy Bateman's basement blossomed into a wonderfully educational community event. Wendy Bateman had this crazy idea about a plastic sweat lodge. She asked her friends to help her cut up 4,000 plastic bags and loop them into huge balls of plastic yarn. From there, Mrs. Bateman wove six long plastic rugs which were draped over a willow frame, much like native Indians drape animal hides to make their sweat lodges.

Virginia Muenzel remembers those hours of cutting and looping, and cutting and looping...

"We were frustrated by running into brick walls. We felt a need to celebrate the fact that we still have trees, air to breathe and drinkable water," says The Echo columnist and member of CHANGE.

Though the day was a success, LaDonna Smith was disappointed Dysart et al didn't lend much support. "Aside from Murray Fearrey, I didn't see any of our municipal government at Earthfest. But I feel the community is way ahead of the government in terms of caring about the environment," she says.

Will Earthfest become an annual event?

"I can't say for certain, but everyone kept coming up to me saying, 'When we do this next time?...'"

An open CHANGE meeting will be held at Sir Sandford Fleming on June 29 at 7 p.m. to discuss the future of Earthfest.

For the dozens of people who took advantage of their commitment to the environment on Saturday, it's hoped they put giving themselves a pat on the back on the agenda.

Homemade pies sold summer long

CARNARVON NEWS
by: ANN McKAY

Sorry I missed the deadline with last week's news so this will cover two weeks.

Wednesday evening, June 6, the U.C.W. met at the home of Edith Barch for a pot luck supper prior to the business meeting and we had quite a good turn out, there will be no more meetings until September.

We all mourn the passing of Bev Sawyer so early in life and extend our sympathies to his family.

On Thursday, June 7, Ladies of the U.C.W. catered a Turkey dinner to the superannuated teachers of Haliburton County.

On Saturday May 9th many people called on Jim and Doris Cooper at the Stanhope Fire Hall on the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Both of the Cowan families were all there with the exception of Sister Violet who lives in Vancouver. Our congratulations.

Nina Prentiss of Lindsay spent some time last week with the Ross Harrisons, and Sinclair Russells.

We were surprised to get a call from the Take Time Coffee Shop that someone was enquiring about Max. Subsequently we were delighted to find Bill Allen and his wife. They had cut wood together 50 years ago and Bill was also a clerk in Rogers Store, now Hair Care. Quite a few people gathered to talk old Times. Bell now resides in Arizona.

On the weekend of June 29 and 30, the U.C.W. will be selling homemade pies at the Church and will continue each weekend throughout the summer on Friday from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 am to 12.

Roene and Jack Barnhart had a lovely surprise over the weekend when their family got together and presented them with tickets to the Anne Murray Show in Hamilton plus a room in a nice Hotel. Hope all other father were treated royally on their day.

The Fred Gregorys of Ottawa were weekend guests of Jack and Hazel Gregory.

The Lion Church Choir will be presenting its annual Berry Entertaining Evening on June 25 and 26 at 7:30 p.m. in Carnarvon. Advance tickets only, $5.00 per ticket.

If you went out to the park last week, you were in for a big surprise. Both Emily Roberts of WeeCare, far left, and these Victoria Street School Kindergarten students took part in Teddy Bear picnics to celebrate the arrival of summer.

Brass Quintet wows Minden audience, promotes workshop

by MICHAEL McHUGH
Staff Reporter

Although it was a field day for children at Archie Stouffer Public School on Monday, they still learned something. And the lesson was in the form of music.

Students were treated to a morning concert by Brass Quintessence, five skilled young musicians from Toronto who are touring around to raise money for an upcoming trip to England and Finland, as well as promote a brass quintet workshop organized by Glen Carter, Archie Stouffer's music teacher.

Before every song, Quintessence's teacher and manager, Howard Barnes, explained its origin to the young crowd.

Barnes told the students that the opening and closing pieces, "Just a Close Walk with Thee," and the gospel favorite "Amazing Grace," were originally sung by black slaves as they carried their dead relatives out of town in funeral processions. Laws at the time forbid blacks from being buried in the town.

"They were treated as lesser humans," said Barnes.

"Amazing Grace" featured the talents of 16-year-old trumpet player Jamie Chiarelli. He brought the quintet up from the slow, soulful sounds of the song, to a fast-paced Dixieland version.

Barnes explained to the audience that during the funeral processions, the mood went from mourning to rejoicing as the group realized their brother or sister was now free from the chains which enslaved them. As the singers tired, friends with trumpets and trombones would take over to create the scenes people now associate with modern-day New Orleans during the Mardis Gras.

Through this little story, Barnes was able to impart a little bit of music history without them realizing they were learning something.

"Finlandia", Finland's national song written in 1900, was one of the group's most powerful performances. Barnes, who arranges all the pieces, reduced this four-part song to suit the five musicians. It was originally written for a 100-piece orchestra.

Brass Quintessence will be going to Finland to represent Canada at the International Society for Music Education. They are very active in the promotion of music education, and will be working on an education video with Canada's premier brass quintet, The Canadian Brass.

Barnes told the crowd that "Findlandia" "reminds you of the hills, lakes and granite cliffs of Haliburton," since the two areas are geographically similar. The audience also learned some musical etiquette, such as not clapping between each movement of the piece.

The most exciting song of the show was "Hava Nagila", which featured 16-year-old tuba player Chris Lee. When the song was announced, the young audience responded with appreciation, and kept their enthusiasm throughout the piece. They bobbed in their seats when the faster sections of the song were played, and cheered and screamed when the quintet finished.

Brass Quintessence have been together for four years, attending the summer workshop every year since then. This year, the workshop will be held from Monday, July 23 to Friday, July 29. The only requirement is that the students have at least one year's experience playing a brass instrument.

Chiarelli explained that the each day the students warm up together before breaking off into groups of five musicians.

"The workshop teaches ensemble playing," said Lee. "There's a lot of personal instructions and coaching."

"And it's a lot of fun, too" said the newest member of the group, 13-year-old Isaac Pulford whose solo piece in Haydon's Andante was more powerful and beautiful than the young player's years would suggest.

For an workshop application form please see the advertisement on this page.

"This is what it's all about... Music in its supreme form," said band teacher Howard Barnes and workshop co-ordinator Glen Carter, of brass quintets. Band members clockwise from top left are: Pippin Hitchcock, 16; Quintus Schulzke, 15; Jamie Chearelli, 16; Chris Lee, 16; and Isaac Pulford, 13.

EXPLANATORY NOTE TO A ZONING AMENDMENT
OF
THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SNOWDON

THE FOLLOWING is an explanation of By-law 9/90, an amendment to Zoning By-law 3/78 of the Township of Snowdon.

THE TOWNSHIP has received 2 applications and several inquiries regarding the keeping of livestock on properties smaller than 50 acres. After careful consideration, Council has decided to regulate livestock operations on properties between 5 acres and 50 acres in size. Such operations are often called hobby farms.

THIS AMENDMENT starts by defining animal units and then defines a hobby farm as an operation having not more than 1 animal unit per acre to a maximum of 10 animal units per property. It next adds a hobby farm to the list of permitted uses in the Rural (RU) Zone and establishes the minimum lot area for hobby farms as 5 acres. The amendment then places certain restrictions on the location of certain facilities on hobby farms.

NO KEY Map is included as the amendment applies to a large part of the Township.

THIS BY-LAW will come into force on the date it was passed by Council if no Notice of Appeal is filed with the Township Clerk.

LOVE & RESPECT

The ingredients for everlasting friendship and solid faith are blended with time, experience

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

WARNING: ANYONE LOOKING for absolutes will not find them in this story. Although we will be talking about the role faith can play in our society, no lightning bolt will strike readers with divine knowledge. If you want a discussion about religion and God—adherence to one not necessarily meaning faith in the other—to give you all the answers, look elsewhere. Here you will find only questions and a continual search for understanding.

For instance, tolerance will be upheld as what can save our society, but too much tolerance is deemed a dangerous thing. How much is too much? Religious creeds add backbone to personalities, but then you are led to ask, "How much is religion, and how much is culture? And how much should religion matter when people want to be friends?"

In a discussion which will never end, it's therefore hard to know where to begin.

...This is a story about Bob and Betty Giuliano and their friends, Monsignor Jack Trese and Sister Mary-Fran Gilleran. It's about sitting in the Giulianos' living room on a hot June afternoon, watching the Giulianos' grandchildren play and talking about what makes a friendship. If you're a follower of Bob Giuliano's column in The Echo, or if you've ever sat with them in their living room, you'll understand why it's impossible to be more specific.

That Mr. Giuliano is an American-born United Church minister who teaches theology to Anglican candidates for priesthood doesn't simplify matters either. Add to it that Sister Mary-Fran spent five years assisting Rev. Giuliano at his parish in Windsor, causing great concern in Roman Catholic circles, including an initially skeptical Monsignor Trese (pronounced Tracy), who is now her staunchest ally.

"This little group here is an organization without any hierarchy," explains Father Trese as "Memoirs of a June Afternoon" begins. "Interaction is going on, but it's not controlled; there's not a leader."

Eyes across the border

It all began with Sister Mary-Fran's search for a place to learn pastoral ministry. It hadn't been a strong point in her training in Detroit, and yet this is where she felt her talents lay.

Looking across the border bridge, her sights fell on Glenwood United Church in Windsor, where Rev. Giuliano was the preacher. After approaching him about becoming his assistant, he discussed it with his congregation.

The shock was palpable. For some, Sister Mary-Fran was the first nun they had ever met. What was she going to teach their children? Would she try to convert them?

"Some people said this wasn't what church was about and left, others saw it as this was what church should be," she remembers, although with so much water under the bridge now, the memories are dim. One-third of the church left when she was accepted, yet their place in the pews was filled by people who embraced this ecumenical approach.

(Gradually she was so much a part of the church they became liberal with her name. The children called her Sister Mary-Fun and at strawberry social time she was Sister Mary-Flan.)

Tongues were tattling back in Detroit, too. "Catholics felt betrayed. If there was work to be done, why wasn't I doing it in the Catholic Church?"

Her bishop was also concerned that sister Mary-Fran would be functioning publicly as a minister. "I could take the service at the United Church and at home I couldn't even read." (More on the "feminization" of Sister Mary-Flan later.)

Time has muted the controversy, but in 1974, the discussions were quite vociferous. A decision had been made however, and Sister Mary-Fran and Rev. Giuliano were sticking to it. "It all seems so old-fashioned now, our lives are way past that... We care about the same things and that denominational stuff doesn't matter."

"We were eager to discover what parts of our faith made us who we were," says Mrs. Giuliano, "the non-cleric in all this." They realized "faith isn't the same as a commitment to a church."

Which isn't to say their individual church ties didn't matter. Monsignor Trese reminds you that he comes from a strong church wedded to traditions. "If the Catholic Church was in total disarray," he couldn't be questioning some of its precepts. "If you have a sense of your own Christ inside, you don't need the rigid structure outside."

People who go beyond that structure, such as Sister Mary-Fran, are needed, but when they "begin to think for themselves, it's a threat to the traditional kind of organization."

What needs to supplant that threat is a genuine respect for each person. "It's a search for balance of some type."

Searching a religious past

Sister Mary-Fran had to do a lot of searching into her own past when after a few weeks at Glenwood, she realized that "being Catholic" was not necessarily limited to where she chose to worship.

Raised in a Catholic home, educated in Catholic school, devoted to her Catholic mission, she now had to ask herself what being Catholic meant.

"I don't know if I had a lot of prejudice, I just had a lot of ignorance," she says. "The evolution for me was to see how much of what we call faith is cultural—it's what you're used to."

She remembers the year Glenwood wanted to mark Advent Week for the first time. As a Catholic, Advent Week had its set traditions which you did simply because you always did them. The United Church, in all its youthful enthusiasm and soul-searching, does things differently—with a lot of debate.

"I went to a meeting and they were asking 'What would we like to do and what do we want it to mean?' We were making a tradition. To me that was very rich and showed me that my tradition was more long-standing than I appreciated. Yet because the Catholic Church was like that, it didn't have any appreciation of why someone else does it another way and that it's still valid."

This led to a new way of dealing with people within the church: "I learned to take a problem to the congregation which we don't do in the Catholic Church. That was new and very helpful."

Working with the Giulianos for five years was a learning experience in itself. "I enjoyed Bob's love affair with the Bible—that was inspirational to me—and Betty's comprehensive way of putting Christianity to work in a practical local way."

Father Trese has remained fairly quiet up till now—can't have too much of this mutual adoration—and when he says of Sister Mary-Fran, "She grew to know what I already knew," one can sense this bravado is borne out of deep friendship.

"Faith that comes out of experience is personal and can't be challenged," he says of those people who fear exposure to other religions. "Head faith is dogma or doctrine.

"We were eager to discover what parts of our faith made us who we were," says Betty Giuliano (bottom left) as she sits with friends (moving clockwise) Monsignor Trese, Sister Mary-Fran Gilleran and husband, Bob Giuliano.

"But the debate is something far deeper. It's about a person's need to be right—you have a grasp of truth and the other person doesn't have the right to be wrong."

People have to accept how subjective truth is. "I accept that my faith is not the perfect presentation of faith."

How did he come to believe this? "My experience comes out like a sermon," he jokes. "Genuine respect for another person is a real fundamental goal and when we respect other people, we listen to what they have to say. And it's also being loved by other people with different backgrounds. I think I had to feel safe for me to open up to it.

"When people like Mary-Fran and Bob and Betty love you for who you are, it gives you a sense of safety so you can accept that love."

The roots of love

Now he has to explain why these people would love him.

In the 1960s, Monsignor Trese was pastor in the inner city of Detroit, Michigan, when racial strife was at its peak. "I ran a poverty program and ended up with a staff of 350 people, 90 per cent of whom were black."

Since that time, "I've always had a sense of the pain of those who are marginal. There's a lot of goodness in people that society doesn't have much use for if you give them a chance."

Sometimes opportunities to display goodness are restricted by a society which "enslaves them expectations and pressures... I have an image of suburbia as a plant on life-support system. There's all these systems you're plugged into." Systems which tell you what to wear, where to eat, how to behave.

"I encourage people to get rid of these systems, to be free and in control of their own lives."

When Monsignor Trese met Rev. Giuliano, the Catholic pastor was bordering on burnout. The United Church minister would reach that point a few years later, and both survived, souls intact, in entirely different ways. The Giulianos moved up to their cottage near Haliburton, and Monsignor Trese took on a parish with 900 families.

"I found a way to survive in the city," says Monsignor Trese, to which Rev. Giuliano adds, "You created a community for city dwellers."

How did he do that? First by recognizing that no matter where we live, "people have the common need to be known for who you are. It's just harder to experience that in the city. (I made the church) a place where they can support one another to be human.

"The goodness is in the city as much anyplace," despite what people say about the coldness of city life. And churches play just as an important role there as they do in the country, where it only seems people are more faithful. "You're back to culture," he says about the myth religious values and church-going are more prevalent in the country. "Going to church and faith are two different things."

"In Birmingham, people have so many choices of places to get together, the church is only one of them," adds Sister Mary-Fran. "In the country, church is one of the only places. But I don't now if it's got anything to do with faith."

Now that Sister Mary-Fran is back in the conversation, we'll talk to her for a while. At this point in the story, she's just completed her five years with Rev. Giuliano and she's now ready to return to Hamtramck, a city inside the city of Detroit.

"When I was at Glenwood, I felt like I lived in the future. When I went back to the United States, I didn't know where I fit in anymore. I didn't know what to do with myself."

By simply crossing the border, the responsibilities she embraced at Glenwood were now curtailed. A woman's role within the Catholic hierarchy is limited, and realization of this prompted one of those life-changing

The feminization of Sister Mary-Fran Gilleran had begun.

"I didn't have feminist language for what I felt until I went back to the States, where I could make sense of it," she says. By talking to other women, she realized she was not alone. There was a great source of untapped knowledge but "no one knew how to share it and no one knew how to use it.

"We couldn't see any vehicle (for bringing these talents together) so we started a women's organization. It became a forum for women to share their spirituality in ways that no one has ever asked them before. For women to tell their own stories, to claim their spirituality and share it, we had to create forums for that to happen."

The Living Our Vision Centre has an eclectic membership whose interests range from massage therapy to helping dysfunctional families. The centre provides the space and, in Monsignor Trese's terms, the safety, for women to embrace their potential.

Right now, primarily single women—there are 4,000 on the mailing list—are members. Nearly all are Christian and most are white, two things Sister Mary-Fran would like to someday change. Integration "is just not happening naturally yet."

The centre has also discussed allowing men into the group.

"The healthiest women said 'What about the men?' but the women continued to say we still need a place to explore just ourselves. I've talked to men's groups and they said the same thing."

As an aside, Monsignor Trese agrees. "There's a growing awareness that men need to be with other men and that's not happening." Old formats of get-togethers—watching the football game, socializing after work, neighbourhood work bees—"don't exist anymore."

"The more women are changing, the more men do," Sister Mary-Fran adds. Men need the opportunity to talk—once again in a safe environment—about how they see their lives.

"You get lonely if you can't talk about (things which affect you) so you create a place where each person's vision is respected," they both agree on their broader sense of how people must relate with one another.

Tensions in diversity

Their philosophies also speak to the turmoil Canadians find themselves faced with: How can a country of immigrants welcome people of diverse cultures and still retain qualities which are uniquely Canadian?

"We have the same argument in my religious order," says Sister Mary-Fran, one of 800 members of Sisters Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, centred in Munroe, Michigan. "How much diversity can we tolerate and still be a group? What do we believe in?

"I think the main thing is whether we trust diversity—the greater the diversity, the healthier the organism. It's like nature."

Sister Mary-Fran, Monsignor Trese and Bob and Betty Giuliano have learned that their organism—their friendship—is all the stronger for their differences. Each one's opinion is respected (although it might be argued against), their ideas are welcomed, their weaknesses are accepted.

And they never talk about religion. By this time, you should realize they only talk about faith.

Clans gather for Highland Games

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

Listen. Closely.

Can't you hear that moan from the highlands?

By Saturday, that haunting, lonely sound will grow to the triumphant roar of massed pipes and drums. Tartans will swirl and twirl at Glebe Park as the clans gather for the Second Annual Highland Games.

The success of last year's games have inspired an impressive line-up for this year's. Eleven pipe bands from all over Ontario will be competing.

"Eleven is a very meaningful number for us," says Games Chairperson Shirley Rapson, referring to the increased interest. She's delighted about the level of excitement generated by a very young enterprise.

Toronto Metro Police is sending two bands and Oakville and Ottawa will each have a band in the competition. As well the Celtic Frost Pipes and Drums from Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury will appear. Even the Toronto Transit Commission will be sending a band up to the highlands (truly the better way!)

The Highland Dancing Competition is expected to exceed last year's 130 participants, which is admirable under any circumstances. However, it is even more impressive when one considers that the games committee — Shirley Rapson, Andy Campbell, Drew Carey, Earl Cooper, Joan Irish, Brian Sachs, and Cindy Rodley — organized the dancing independent of the dancers' association.

And watch where you're going. Cabers and hammers aplenty will be flying as part of this year's heavy events.

For those who appreciate the classical music of the bagpipes, the Piobaireachd competition is a necessity. "There's even some murmuring of a champion coming," says Mrs. Rapson.

The fun will start on Friday, with a parade through town at 4 p.m. "It's just to say to everybody 'Tomorrow's the day!'"

Although official opening ceremonies are at 12:30, those eager for an early start can enjoy individual piping competitions starting at 8:30 a.m.

And while the sun sets, everyone can relax and enjoy the Ceilidh, a celebration of dancing, pipes, story-telling and folk music.

Is Mrs. Rapson excited? "It's going to be wonderful."

Princess's speech touches veterans

LEGION NEWS
by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

As Her Royal Highness, Princess Margriet of the Netherlands, laid the first memorial wreath at the Vancouver cenotaph on Sunday morning, June 10, the 33rd Biennial Convention of Dominion Command of The Royal Canadian Legion was officially and solemnly heralded in.

Rain did not dampen the enthusiasm of close to 5,000 participants of the massive parade which followed. Flanking Princess Margriet, were Comrade Gaston Garceau, Dominion President, and The Honourable Gerald S. Merrithew, Minister of Veterans Affairs.

Over 5,000 delegates and observers packed the Vancouver Convention. Centre to hear her opening address. Her Royal Highness along with her Lady in Waiting, her husband Mr. Pieter van Vollenhoven and Mr. and Mrs. Garceau were piped on stage followed by other Legion and Government officials from across Canada. Both the Netherland and Canadian national Anthems were played.

The Princess was graciously attired in a white and black dress with black

Lifetime of service draws to an end as Kinmount's Simpsons sell station

CLARKE SIMPSON HAS A FACE everybody wants to talk to.

With his rosy-red cheeks and brilliant smile, it's hard not to — just ask anyone who's ever stopped by his garage in Kinmount.

There he and his wife had, until just last week, done business the old-fashioned way: they earned the respect of their customers by giving them quality service and an unhurried attitude.

"When we weren't busy we always liked to pass the time of day with the customers," he says. It is this service-with-a-smile attitude that has many people coming back — even from as far away as Toronto.

"I've had people coming all the way from Toronto to have their cars fixed."

Simpson opened his garage in 1971 with four gas pumps and five mechanic's bays. It was a massive garage built for the pre-energy crisis gas-guzzlers of the 1970s.

But now the only section of the garage that's open for business are the gas pumps. The cavernous garage with its car bays is empty and dark.

"We stopped taking in cars about a month ago," says Simpson. "After we knew we were going to sell."

Simpson and his wife Glenda are finally retiring from the garage business, after 44 years of marriage and gas-pumping together.

Before Simpson opened his garage in 1971, he and his wife had been working for his father's garage since 1946 across the town.

"Near the end of June I think we'll take our first trip," he says. "I want to see Canada — we'll go from the east coast to the west coast."

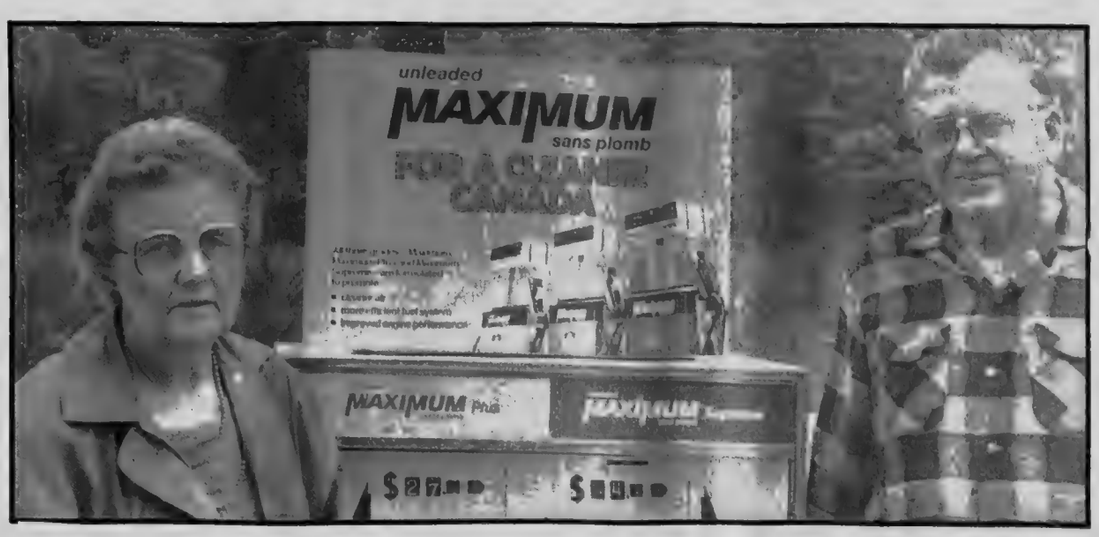
The Simpsons haven't had much time for anything but work during their long marriage. Days off have been few and far between, and the long hours gruelling.

"We worked 98 hours a week each—seven days a week, 14 hours a day," says Simpson.

Expecting an early retirement, they bought a motorhome in 1982 but have only been able to log 15,000 kilometres on its odometer.

"We never had too many holidays," he says. "But now we're going to travel."

Besides travelling, Simpson says he also wants to pursue some projects he never had time for while he was working — restoring three old cars he has parked in various garages around town.



'We never had many holidays': Glenda and Clarke Simpson

One is a 1928 Model 'A' Ford, one is a 1956 Mercury Meteor, and the other is a 1970 Ford Galaxie 500.

Although he and his wife currently drive a late-model American car, Simpson is critical of the way cars are made these days — and the prices they are asking for them.

"It's a bunch of nonsense what they're coming out with now," he says. "Although some of the stuff they've got in the cars are better now. But then again, the cars today don't have to put up with the road conditions we used to have. The gravel roads make the wheels pound the insides of the car."

Simpson doesn't have any statistics for the number of gallons of gas he's pumped in his fifty years in the garage business, but it must run into the millions of gallons.

"Once my wife and I pumped 650 gallons of gas in 35 minutes — that must be a record," he says. "And one Sunday Glenda and I pumped 3000 gallons the whole day. That was a lot."

Simpson recalls the old days of cheap gasoline and service with a wistful attitude. He says that high taxes

May was a very busy month for students

HODGSON HIGHLIGHTS

by: J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School Students

by THE 5A CLASS

MAY HAS BEEN a busy month at J.D.H.E.S. The first week of May was Education Week. May first and second was Open House, when parents were invited to come in to visit classrooms and tour the school.

It's getting close to the end of the year, that means we get lots of tests before the big report card comes.

We held parent interviews on May 2. There should be no big surprises for parents on the June report.

The weather for May has been mostly cool and rainy. We've been inside for a lot of recesses. We've had to use what's in the classrooms to have fun. We talk and play games. Most people don't enjoy indoor recesses. We need our fresh air and exercise.

The month of May has kept our principal, Mr. Devolin, and his staff busy with I.P.R.C. meetings. I.P.R.C. stands for Identification, Placement & Review Committee. The meetings are held in Mr. Devolin's office. The school is having meetings to help students with special needs by placing them in small groups with the work they need. This might be for a forty-minute period or up to a half a day. The people invited to the meetings are teachers, parents, Mr. Robinson, and Mr. McNab. it is the law for I.P.R.C. meetings to be held before any student receives special help!

On the fourth of May, we had a Professional Activity Day. Some kids went to places and others just stayed home. We had a fun day.

But not our teachers! Even though the kids got to stay home or go on trips, the teachers had to do work. They could have stayed at our school or gone to another school in the county. Several teachers travelled to programs outside the county. Some teachers listened to guest speakers while others enjoyed an outdoor activity. Many of them worked on computer programs. Co-operative games were held in the gym and our junior teachers worked on their Social Studies course. The principal and vice principal are considered teachers so they have to go to the meetings too. We don't know about you, but we think teachers do a lot of work to educate us.

On May 11th, Mrs. Lynn Kimmet from the Lung Association spoke to Grade 4 and 5 students. She showed us a video about smoking and why it is bad for us. We thought it was interesting. There is a Rap or Rhyme for Healthy Lungs Contest that the children may enter. We were given buttons that had Lungs are for Life written on them. One thing I hope we never do when we get older is smoke.

Did you visit the Rails' End Gallery to see our art? it was filled with art done by kids from J.D.H.E.S. Mrs. Kennedy thought that the art gallery was rather bare so she decided to use kids' art. Her class gathered up 30 masterpieces. With her class included, they got around 400 pieces of art. They didn't just have paintings. They had "3-D" art. All of the masterpieces had style, organization and creativity. It took four hours for Mrs. Kennedy and her three helpers, Nancy Douglas, Bronwen Winsley, and Niki Fleugel, to put the art on display. Thanks people! The display did not cost any money if you wanted to make a donation of money you could.

From our school, we have 18 children who will attend to the Fine Arts Summer School. They are: Reagan Brown, Kristen Sisson, Devon Dart, Trina Howe, Trevor Moore, Rachel Dejong, Caitlin Pettit, Carolyn Ratz, Bob Sisson, Niki Fluegel, Jessica Martino, Curtis Reynolds, Ryan Ellis, Jenny Hughey, Margaret Teljeur, Laura Lancia, Will Clements, Erin Woods.

CONGRATULATIONS KIDS!

We had two hotdog days in May. Parent helpers cooked the food. There were members of the Student Council Representatives who served the children. We purchased 50 dozen wieners, 50 dozen buns, 50 dozen donuts and 480 drinks each time. The money, after expenses goes toward bus trips, school camera, Home and School, and many other good uses. We look forward to and enjoy hot dog days. We don't know about you, but our moms love hot dog days. NO LUNCHES TO PACK!!

On the 15th of May, the Grade 8 students had their class picture taken along with all the teachers who worked with them this year. The pictures are 8x10s and students may buy them for $7.50. A tip: They should write the name of each student on the back of the photo. When they grow old and forgetful, they'll know who the students are. Everyone at J.D.Hodgson School wishes them good luck in High School.

This year the 4s and 5s went to Camp Wanakita for their school trips. The 5s had a busy day on May 24th, They studied minerals, rocks, weather, and light. they were broken up into groups and rotated around the activities. They worked for an hour at each activity. Some of the students brought their own lunches. Some bought their lunch there. The bus picked us up around nine a.m. and brought us back in time to go home. That was the same for both grades.

The 4s went on May 25th. They took 64 students on the trip. The 4s brought back insects, animals and other pond life. Pond life is what they are studying. This trip allowed all the kids to do science outdoors.

We got a new learning experience. All the 5s and 4s certainly enjoyed it!

On May 28, Mrs. Carter and 60 Grade 7 students went to Saint Marie in Midland, Ontario for a school trip. Thy went for seven hours. They chose this trip because it's about the Grade 7 history course. The students had been taught the history of the Huron Indians and the priests who worked among them. Mrs. Carter has been there ten times before! This tells that it's a very worthwhile experience for students in Grade 7. We hope we can go there when we are in Grade 7.

Who is Wendy Bateman? Well that is a question that Mrs. Moore's Grade 4 and Mrs. Robertson's Grade 3-4 can answer. These classes went to the Fails' End Gallery, on Tuesday, May 29, to see some of Mrs. Bateman's work. Mrs. Bateman has been weaving and spinning for the last 18 years. These lucky students were able to touch, walk and crawl through the structures and play different games, like a scavenger game, take part in a drama as well as create a piece of art entitled "Acid Rain Waterfall." These students must have enjoyed themselves.

are driving the prices of everything too high.

"The other day I found an old towing bill dated April 8, 1966," he says. "It was for towing Dr. Good out of the mud. The total cost was $3.50."

When Simpson started pumping gas back in the 1940s, gasoline was 25 cents a gallon, he says. In 1971, when he opened the garage he and his wife are currently retiring from, gasoline sold for 34.9 cents a gallon.

"It shouldn't be as expensive as it is now," he says. "It's all the taxes they've got on it that have driven the prices up."

Sitting and talking with visitors in what is now his former station, Simpson can't help but dash out once in a while and help out by pumping a gas tank or two or washing someone's windshield.

One group of customers has Simpson filling up three little red boat gas tanks.

"Going fishing?" asks Simpson with a smile.

"That's right," says the customer.

"That's beautiful," says Simpson. "Have a good time."

It's not poignant, and it's not Shakespeare, but it's friendly and caring — it's Clarke Simpson.

"Well, we won't miss the hard work so much," says Simpson as he takes a load off his feet and sits in a wooden chair in the garage.

"But we're really going to miss the people a lot."

Princess returns home hat and accessories, as she delivered her address in both English and French. Members were visibly moved as she spoke of Canadian hospitality to her mother and especially when she was born on January 19, 1943. Her family fled to Canada when the Netherlands fell to the Nazis. At the birth of the Princess, the hospital section in Ottawa was declared Dutch territory so Margriet would be truly Dutch.

She called this visit a "homecoming," and spoke of the "joy of freedom regained" of being in Canada during this 45th anniversary year of the freedom of Holland. She recalled the 300,000 Dutch people who turned out to welcome Canadian veterans last May. (Several were members of our Branch).

The Princess spoke fondly of her four sons and their attachment to Canada. She said that young Dutch children must always be aware of Canadian sacrifices during the liberation. This reminder is reinforced in the children as they lovingly tend to Canadian cemeteries and lay flowers on the graves. She spoke with great sensitivity of the many young Canadians who had never been off farms or away from home who volunteered to fight for democracy, freedom and human rights.

In conclusion, the Princess said, "As the Berlin wall came down last year, the task which you began finally ended. The people of Europe are free. And we will remember!"

Business resumes

Convention business resumed at 8:30 Monday morning to debate the future of Legion, legislation affecting branches, the wellbeing of veterans, community work, and to elect a new slate of Dominion officers.

The theme throughout the Convention was Canadian unity, and the motto was "From Sea Unto Sea" — "D'un Ocean a L'Autre." Concern was expressed that to soften on this issue could mean that thousands of Canadians may have died in vain.

While peace and unity were stressed, guest speakers such as Dr. Maurice Tugwell and Vice Admiral C. Thomas reinforced the need for a strong defence system. Key statements summed up such need: "Poland did not regain freedom, but exchanged one tyranny for another." "When we live in a world where a dictator can order the destruction of a city or country is reason enough for non-disarmament." "We have no right to abandon the lessons of history, nor to ignore the privileges of freedom."

The need to alleviate deplorable living conditions among our comrades in British Commonwealth countries was brought to the delegates' attention. On points of privilege throughout the convention, many personal and branch donations were made. As a result, and with pre-convention donations, ap-

COMMUNITY NEWS

Former Minden principal respected

Harold R. Morgan

An educator in Haliburton County and a former principal of the Archie Stouffer Elementary School, Harold R. Morgan died suddenly at Minden on January 10th.

In his 44 years as a public-spirited resident here, Harold Morgan contributed immeasurably to the cultural growth of this community. In the past he served as secretary of the Minden Rotary Club and the Minden Monarchs hockey team, and more recently the Senior Curlers, the Minden Library and Cultural Centre, the Haliburton District S.T.O., and the Board of Stewards of the Minden United Church. Harold's unassuming manner, quick insight, and easy humour made him a fine teacher and a valued committee worker. He will be remembered with affection by hundreds of former students, colleagues and friends.

"A very special man", "gentle", "caring", "humble", "faithful", "a leprechaun smile", "a quiet example" these were words used by friends and loved ons to describe his influence on their lives.

Born in Western Canada, Harold received his education in Vancouver and Toronto. He was a graduate of Toronto Teachers' College and of the University of Toronto, where he majored in maths and sciences. Former Grade 8 pupils will recall how enthusiastically he led them through the "new" math, and on field trips to explore the caves and rock formations. Having worked in Kapuskasing before coming here, he was familiar with the north country, and was an ardent fisherman. As a naturalist, he loved to discover and paint the beauty of the Highlands. He married Edna Hadley of Gooderham, and they were blest with three children, Beth, John, and Harold.

Beth Morgan was a special child, and as a result of her special needs, we now have Special Education classes in all schools of our County, the first being in Minden, to which a classroom library was donated in memory of Beth.

John and Harold Jr. were honour students and valedictorians at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. John is now living in Germany, working as a research physicist. Harold Jr. is a United Church minister at Rawdon, Quebec. Both are married, and there are nine grandchildren.

During his teaching career of 28 years in Minden, Harold saw the school grow from three elementary classrooms into the present Archie Stouffer elementary School. Since 1974 he enjoyed an active retirement, pursuing his many interests and hobbies, and incidentally becoming a good cook, specializing in mushrooms, morels, fiddleheads and the numerous other edible wild plants about which he had wide knowledge. Harold had well learned the secret of a contented life, enriched by the simple pleasures of nature and the love of family and friends.

Thomas A. Kempis wrote:- "First keep thyself in peace, and then shalt thou be able to bring others to peace. The peaceable man does more good than one that is very learned."

Our lives are rich from the peace and warmth we received from having Harold for a friend.

Show calls for talented people

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

The Haliburton County Board of Education honoured retiring teachers and long-time employees at the chairman-of-the-Board Banquet held at Wig-a-mog Inn on June 13. Marjorie Tighe, after years of devoted care to the Wilberforce school, was among those in attendance. Marjorie was presented with a pair of bookends bearing her name, the school motif and the year of her retirement.

Marjorie has not severed all her ties with the school and holds dear many happy memories of her relationship with teachers and children.

July brings Country Good Times and Donna Atkinson, organizer of the amateur show, would like to hear from people with entertainment talent who would like a chance to perform on stage and who have the ability to sing, dance, play a musical instrument etc. Call Donna Atkinson to secure a place on the program at 448-2991.

You know from experience that the annual strawberry dinner sponsored by the U.C.W. members is bound to be excellent. This year's event is Sat. June 30, at the Lloyd Watson Centre. Come and enjoy a superb meal. Dinner is served from 5 until 7 P.M. Cost for adults is $7.00, children 5 to 10 $3.00 and pre-schoolers free.

It is sad to hear about the vanishing frog species. We did seem to have the usual number of Spring peepers. Other types of Wildlife are flourishing. Robins appear more numerous with the first brood now fully fledged and the nest ready for the next clutch of eggs. In that peaceful period before dusk we are entertained by nature's orchestra. Loud and clear is the call of the robins, tree toads chime in, many bumble bees add their hum. A whir of wings signals the presence of the hummingbird while in the distance is heard the drum of the woodpecker. This is Haliburton harmony.

Gooderham recreation planners are introducing something special this year called Horse Maneuvers. Two great days of fun are coming on June 23 and 24. This family affair includes pleasure horse riding, trail riding and non-competitive field events, tennis and baseball. On Sat. at 7 p.m. there will be a costume ride through town. You may want to buy yourself a horse to take part in these activities. For information about events phone Sharon at 448-2981 or Tammy 448-3159.

Horse maneuvers to be this weekend in Gooderham.

Herman Poppe was a victim of the Martin Lumber mill closing. Herman worked as secretary-treasurer for the company for twenty or more years. He says that he is now developing a second career.

Studies with the Ontario Para Legal Association have qualified him as a consultant in the para legal field, working from his home in Wilberforce. A para legal consultant can provide advice for simple, routine areas of the law. When legal situation beyond their scope arise they are automatically referred to an appropriate lawyer. Herman can help with matters pertaining to small claims court, financial consultation, traffic violations, name change, immigration, criminal pardon, landlord and tenant matters, workers' compensation, lawyer support services' which cover uncontested divorce, simple wills etc. Good luck to Herman in his new business venture of Poppe & Associates Ltd.

The Jordens family attended the graduation of daughter Marcie on Sat. June 16th. Marcie graduated from Sir Sandford Fleming College having completed a two-year course in fashion merchandising. The event was held at the Peterborough Memorial Centre. Marcie will be employed at Tip Top Tailor in Peterborough as a management trainee. Congratulations Marcie.

1989 Financial Statement

To the Members of Council, Inhabitants and Ratepayers of the Corporation of the United Townships of Galway and Cavendish

AUDITORS' REPORT

We have examined the consolidated balance sheet of the Corporation of the United Townships of Galway and Cavendish as at December 31, 1989 and the consolidated statement of operations for the year then ended. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests and other procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion, these consolidated financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Corporation of the United Townships of Galway and Cavendish as at December 31, 1989 and the results of its operations for the year then ended in accordance with the accounting principles disclosed in note 1 to the financial statements applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

COMMUNITY NEWS

SENIORS SIZZLE: Of the 260 participants in the Senior Games, 215 enjoyed a lunch and awards ceremony at the Haliburton Legion last Thursday. Although the area games have concluded, the District 11 games against Muskoka will run from June 18 to 26. It is the first year that Muskoka will participate and since finalists will be going on the the Ontario championship in London, competitors will be keen.

Lions' work at camp is recognized

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

The sympathy of the community is extended to the family of George Selby of Portsmouth, Ohio who passed away recently in hospital in Columbus, Ohio. George's parents and he and his brother Homer, all of whom predeceased him, spent their summers in Dorset at their cottage and were well known in the village. George and his wife Joanne have many friends in the area and he will be missed by many.

The Dorset Seniors held its final meeting of the season on June 13 with a pot-luck supper at 6 p.m. A good turnout was expected.

The Dorset Lions Club held their eighteenth annual Charter Night dinner dance at the Dorset Recreation Centre on Saturday, June 2. A delicious dinner was catered by the Lifeliners. The affair was well attended with 73 members and guests present. There were several awards given. Myrle Woolman, Steve's father, was given a special award for his outstanding work at the Lion's Camp Dorset. Murial Wyrozub received an award in honour of her late husband, Bill, a 35-year Lion who also devoted a great deal of time working at Camp Dorset. There was an award for Kim Tebby, who was not present, in recognition of the numerous and generous donations to Camp Dorset at the time of her late husband Steve's death.

After the dinner and ceremonies were over there was dancing to the music of D.J. Andy MacKay. An enjoyable evening for a benevolent, hard working group of people who received their charter in 1972. The Dorset Lions Club members are to be commended for their many, many good deeds in the community, over and above their praise worthy work at Camp Dorset.

We wish a very happy birthday to Joey Ruthkosky who will be 14 on June 14, also to Jamie Doyle who will be 10 on June 15.

The Dorset Home and School Committee is having a meeting on Wednesday, June 20 at 6:15 p.m. at the school to discuss a summer fund raiser. All parents of Dorset students and any interested community members are asked to attend. After the meeting, the committee would like to invite our school volunteers and their spouses to join us. We're going to take ourselves out for supper, a "Give ourselves a pat on the back", and a chance to socialize. If you would like to come, please contact Kerry Lock 766-2246.

We wish a very happy birthday to Irene Clayton who celebrates on June 2nd.

Lots of sales coming up in the near future. On Saturday, June 30, the Knox United Church is having its 24th Annual Auction, Bake Sale and Flea Market. These will be held at the Township Garage and Fire Hall: The Flea Market at 10 a.m., the Bake Sale at 2:00 p.m. and the Auction at 6:30 p.m.

Donations are welcome for all three events. If you wish pick-ups please call: Ted Morris 766-2257, Roy MacKay 766-2437, Mike Buss 635-1831, John McLennan 766-2420, Robinson's Store 766-2415, Ross Rabjohn 766-2207, Ken Bryant 766-2563.

There will be a Bake Sale and Flea Market on June 30 at the Dorset Senior Centre on Hwy. 117, a mile south of Dorset. This sale begins at 9.00 a.m.

We have two new additions to our population. Early on the morning of June 9 a baby girl was born to Karen and Michael Fuller at Huntsville Hospital. Robin Elizabeth weighed 7 lbs 1 oz, a third child for the happy parents.

On June 9, Nick and Cathy Morris became the proud parents of a 7 lb. 1 oz. baby girl. Courtney is a sister for two-year-old Joshua. Congratulations to parents and grandparents of both little girls.

Three Cheers: Lion's Bingo is with us once again beginning on Monday, June 2nd at 8:00 p.m.

Eightieth birthday celebrated with family

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Hello League Readers. On June 2nd, Vera Harrison celebrated her 98th birthday with visits from her son, Barry and his wife Molly, also her nephew Keith and his wife Isa, her daughter and her husband, Ruth and Tony Samarillo. Ruth's face is a familiar one around here, as she regularly visits four times a week and reads and sings to her mother. Happy birthday Vera from the residents.

I celebrated my 80th birthday on June 6. My son Terry Barnum said he, his wife Norma and Norma's mother were taking me to Peterborough for dinner. When we arrived at the restaurant, Terry told me to sit at a long table with people at it. I thought, "What does he want me to sit there for". Then I realized it was most of my own family. There was my Grandson Kevin Barnum and his wife Claudia of Apsley, Grandson Rich Barnum of Sharbot Lake, Terry and Norma Barnum of Haliburton, Clara Austin, Mae and Roy Cameron, Jacqueline Yateman of Peterborough, Wilda LaRue, Scott and Emily LaRue. I was very surprised and happy to see them all. Kevin said the grace and we had a good dinner. A friend from Haliburton came down with Scott.

In latter part of last week, Lucy Burgess had an enjoyable visit with Margaret Lunny and Margaret Wright both of Oshawa, renewing their friendship which first begun at Meadow Crest Baptist Church in Brooklin, north of Whitby.

Thursday was our tea party day. Ladies of Minden lawn bowling provided the tea party. Everyone enjoyed the lovely lunch and wish to thank these ladies very much.

Friday was Happy Hour in the auditorium. Mary Smith and Jean Taylor set up the tables and chairs. The entertainment was provided by Charlie Hadley, Don White and Doris on the piano. The Residents and their friends were ably served by volunteers, Don and Ellen Holden, Mary Guillemin and Jankie Thomas. The Residents sincerely thank everyone who helped.

That evening the Four Plus One Grandfathers were here entertaining in the main lounge. It was a very enjoyable evening and we thank Bill, Eldon, George, Don and Charlie very much.

Saturday night May, Roy, Jacqueline, Terry, Norma, Claudia and I enjoyed a surprise dinner given by Rod and Chantelle Thurston in honor of Chantelle's mother and father. Scott and Emily LaRue celebrated their 25th wedding at Pinestone. It was a delicious dinner and happy evening, meeting many friends. We thank Chantelle and Rod for a lovely evening.

Sunday evening chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess who gave a very encouraging message and Alice Jons played the organ. We thank Rev. Burgess and Alice very much.

Congratulations to Lola Prentice, on her birthday June 11. She had dinner with her family Sunday night. Happy birthday and we wish her good health.

Tuesday June 5, Terri Lynn and Everett Fearrey were here in the main lounge to sing and play their guitar for us for which we thank them sincerely.

Monday evening, we were shown three reels of the "incredible rocky Mountain Race". Thank you Ena (Marion) and Ruth (Rice), we enjoyed them very much.

Tuesday morning, the Lioness Club presented Rheta Jones, administrator with a cheque for $1304., proceeds from the garage sale that the Lionesses held in aid of the bus fund. Words cannot express our thanks but w do sincerely thank everyone who worked so hard.

In the afternoon Jock Mavor showed slides of England and Scotland and especially of York, the area of where Mrs. Oliver grew up. Several of the Residents saw places where they lived. England has so many beautiful cathedrals and castles. We saw the magnificent Yorkminster Cathedral. The Residents thank Mr. Mavort heartily and will be looking forward to his slides on Switzerland, Austria and Germany.

Doris read to us for half an hour before dinner and Dianna Morris finished that book and began another.

Once again the end of the penpal writing period has come to an end. Wednesday we had all the Residents and the children who we have been writing to in the auditorium for hot dogs, hamburgers and ice cream. Teacher Mrs. Berry suggested pen pals to Linda and Doris who, with Mrs. Berry, organized the project and made it a success, last year. This year Molly McCarthy collected our letters many of us who needed help to write, and made sure the children's letters get to us. She reminded us when it was time to answer our pen pal. At the Barbeque today, she was presented with a certificate and a volunteer pin, thanking her for her volunteer, work showing our appreciation.

One child thanked Hyland Crest for having the children to the barbeque and another child presented Doris with $25 for our bus fund, which we greatly appreciate. Finally the children were divided into groups and taken on a tour of the home. It was a happy occasion for everyone.

West Guilford holds reunion

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Brian and Elsie Henderson attended the graduation of their daughter, Brenda Morley, on June 9, 1990 at Civic Auditorium, Oshawa as she received her B.A. in Early Childhood Education. Brenda's husband is Allan Morley, and they have two children: Michael 10 and Jennifer 9. Congratulations to Brenda for returning to university and achieving this degree.

I have been asked to make it clear that everyone who has ever attended school in West Guilford at any time in any of the school buildings ever is welcome to attend the festivities on June 30 at the Reunion Dance at the Centre. 8:30 p.m. and of course the reunion itself at 2 p.m. July 1. Anyone who is even interested in people who attended are most welcome.

Be sure to label scrapbooks or albums you bring.

If you can volunteer your time for an hour in any of the Canada Day events, please give Carol Stamp a call at 754-2168 or phone me to pass along a message: 754-2278.

The arena in Haliburton was the setting for the annual inspection of the Army Cadets: 1129 Royal Canadian Cadet Corps, Hastings Prince Edward Regiment. These young people are given the opportunity through this program "to participate in activities which are enjoyable, purposeful, and challenging." The Legion Pipe Band was on hand to provide music for the Inspection Parade.

Demonstrations in Drill, Range Safety, and First Aid were performed with obvious expertise. Afterwards the public was invited upstairs in the arena to view to Static Displays and to join the Cadets in a small reception.

Congratulations to all participants. We especially note the ones from Guilford: Jeremey MacDuff, Jason Fountain, Carl Mueller, Jason Mueller, and Richard Aschenbrenner. If there are some I have missed from this area, please give me a call so that names can be recognized in next week's column.

Heather Harrington is home from Calgary to visit her parents, Ted and Carol Duncan.

Congratulations to Debb Neve and David Rolfe on the birth of their daughter, Bronwen.

We had the honour and pleasure at St. Andrew's Church of a visit from Bishop Terry Finlay on Sunday morning.

St. Andrew's manning on of the booths — Baird's — at the Highland Games on Saturday in Globe Park. Our patron saint would no doubt approve of this appropriate undertaking.

Sid and Louise Cooper, Earl & I attended the retirement party on Saturday, June 16th at Pinestone Inn given for Bill Valentine. Eagle Lake was represented by Vic and Bicky Ross and Earl and Marie Wallace. Presentations were made by Ann Varty and by Bill Johnston and good wishes extended by the company of fellow teachers and friends.

proximately $75,000 was raised from the appeal. This will be allocated to needy veterans in the Caribbean areas.

Many doctors are taking advantage of the Legion fund for medical training in gerontology. A convention resolution will extend this to a nursing program.

An expression of loyalty was dispatched to our Sovereign, Queen Elizabeth II, and a reply of good wishes was received.

A letter was sent to Prime Minister Mulroney urging our government to exert influence to ensure understanding and harmony among all Canadians, and to pledge that the Royal Canadian Legion is unequivocally in favour of Canadian unity.

With the installation on thursday of the Dominion Executive Council, the Convention was adjourned. The 1992 site is to be Quebec City; 1994, Calgary; 1996, Toronto.

Comrades Fred Williams of Newfoundland is Dominion President. J. Jolleys of Pacific Command is First Vice President. Joe Kobolak, Past President of Ontario Command is one of four Vice Presidents.

I was honoured and proud to represent Branch 129 as your delegate. A complete convention report will be prepared and placed on office file for your interest. Pertinent resolutions will be given to each executive member.

Municipality of Dysart et al

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

TO CONSIDER A PROPOSED LOT LEVY FEE PURSUANT TO SECTION 50 (5) OF THE PLANNING ACT, 1983 AS AMENDED

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Municipality of Dysart et al will consider adopting a "Lot Levy" policy pursuant to Section 50 (5) of the Planning Act, 1983 as amended. This section of the Planning Act allows municipalities to impose a levy on new development in the Municipality. The purpose of a lot levy policy is to establish a system for the collection of sufficient funds as a condition of development so that the need for services and facilities required by new development is paid for by new development instead of placing an unfair burden on existing development which has already funded existing services and facilities. Lot levies are not intended to solely fund improvements to services and facilities which are considered inadequate for the present population.

A pulic meeting will be held to consider the concept of lot levies on Monday, June 25, 1990 at 7:00 p.m. in the auditorium of the Dysart Community Centre & Arena. All interested persons are invited to attend this meeting. Written or verbal comments will be considered by a Committee of Council.

Please direct questions to the undersigned during regular office hours.

DATED at the Township of Dysart this 31st day of May, 1990.

Jody L. Ainsworth,
A.M.C.T. (A)
Planning Administrator

TOWNSHIPS OF GALWAY AND CAVENDISH

PUBLIC MEETING CONCERNING PROPOSED OFFICIAL PLAN AMENDMENT

TAKE NOTICE that the Corporation of the Townships of Galway and Cavendish will hold a public meeting on Saturday, July 21, 1990 at 9:00 a.m. at the Municipal Building in Kinmount to consider a proposed Official Plan Amendment under Section 17 of The Planing Act.

The proposed Official Plan Amendment consists of two text changes in the Official Plan of the Townships of Galway and Cavendish that were inadvertently omitted during approval of the Official Plan by the Ministry of Municipal Affairs.

The amendment adds the following policies to the Official Plan;

1) "The Township will not financially support any extension of School Bus Services beyond that existing at the date of adoption of the Plan, nor will the Township support subsidizing any resident for the transportation of their children to the school bus."

2) " An application for consent to sever an existing lot shall have the effect of creating only 1 (one) severed lot and 1 (one) retained lot. Each additional lot proposed shall require an additional severance application."

Since the Amendment is strictly textual in nature, a map is not necessary for the general circulation of this notice.

ANY PERSON may attend the public meeting and make written and/or verbal representation either in support of or in opposition to the proposed amendment.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION relating to the proposed amendment is available for inspection at my office during regular office hours.

Dated at the Townships of Galway and Cavendish this 15th day of June, 1990.

Firefighters to hold horse draw

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS
by: MILLIE MOSS

The Haliburton County Home Support Services held its annual meeting at the Pinestone Inn where they celebrated its tenth Anniversary on June 8. Bill Scott M.P. and M.P.P. John Eakins were in attendance to see an award presented posthumously to Jean Hollobon in recognition for the many services and dedication rendered by her late husband, Bob, over the years.

Congratulations to Betty Brown of Bolsover who was the lucky winner of the $520 bingo jackpot at the Kirkfield Lions Club on Tuesday June 12. Betty's husband I'm told, was the winner of a very nice prize in a recent Lotto 649. Way to go!!

That was quite a sudden rainfall Wednesday evening and once again, we on Shadow Lake Road 3 sat with candles/oil lamps etc. This time though, it was for only half an hour.

The Norland Volunteer Firefighters will be holding their annual Horse Draw in Ward Park, at the north end of Norland on Highway 35 on Saturday, July 14. At the same time the Norland Recreation Committee will be sponsoring a Home/Craft Show and for this event tables are still available. For more information call Grace Graham at 454-3404-8552.

Norland Area Seniors held a General Meeting at 1:30 P.M. Thursday, June 7 when Gus Boyd sat in for President Lloyd Brown and did a nightly fine job. Our sympathy at this time to Lloyd and Vera Brown, all the family and friends of Lloyd's brother who died recently.

Sympathy also to Bob Marsh, his wife Christine and their young daughters Sara and "Allie" all of RR1, Kinmount, other family and friends of Bob's mother who recently passed away in England.

Norland Seniors are hoping for a good turnout for the upcoming bazaars. More on that later but in the meantime many items are needed to make it a terrific sale. If you have anything you wish to donate (no clothing please) you may call Lloyd Brown at 454-1509.

Congratulations to the new "Cavendish Community Centre" in its grand opening June 16, 1990. Watch here for future "doings" of this new Centre on Highway 507 just south of Beaver Lake Rd.

A belated happy birthday to Gus Boyd of Norland. Gus and I went to our Horticultural garden job on Highway 35 and we did a great job, didn't we Gus? Later in the day I spotted Jean and George Crisp also of Norland, busy at their Horticulture garden in front of the Municipal Office.

Hope all is well at your house and if you wish your news in this column just give me a call at 454-2395. to all you dads out there, Happy Fathers Day.

OPP hosts bike rodeo

CARDIFF NEWS
by: DEBBIE BENTLEY

On Tuesday, June 12 a bike rodeo was held at Cardiff School. It was sponsored by the Apsley OPP and Petro Canada. Prizes of multi colored sweatshirts, bells, water bottles and reflector gift certificates were handed out to the top three of each class from Grade 1 to 8. Winners are as follows: Grade 1 and 2: Tim Harding, Robert Dunford and Shea Horning, Jeffrey Card; Grade 2 and 3: Amanda Knott, Adam Passaretti, Brian Cook; Grade 3 and 4: Aiden Pay (Aiden's score of 290/300 was the highest for the whole school), Rob McArthur, Ian Greaves; Grade 5 and 6: David Evans and Eric Norrish, Nicole Ostroski and Jesse Packard, David Shaw and Eddie Madden; Grade 7 and 8: Rhonda Fults, Maggi Pay, Thrisha Thomson.

A total of 58 students participated. Officers Constable Peter Butorac and Constable Bill Stevens of OPP Apsley set the course up and helped parents and teachers with it. Special thanks goes out to these people who helped Mrs. S. Traviss, Mr. C. Childs, Mrs. A. Greaves, Mrs. P. Maddock, Mr. J. Croft, Mrs. D. Bentley, Mrs. D. Card, Mr. B. Sararas, Mr. B. Lockwood and Mr. B. Stevens.

"EDUCATION: THE BACK-BONE OF SPECIALIZED SERVICE."

Contract Law, Mortgage Law, Law of Agency, Mortgage Financing and Standards of Business Practice are but a sampling of the courses an aspiring real estate practitioner must complete before being licensed by a provincial body to trade in real estate.

Moreover, the real estate industry itself endeavours consistently to upgrade the educational requirements related to real estate licensing. The result is continually updated programs in which REALTORS hone their skills, so that housing consumers may receive the best services available.

...and that can make a REAL difference!

REALTOR is a registered certification mark which identifies real estate licensees who are members of the Haliburton District Real Estate Board and adhere to a strict Code of Ethics and Standards of Business Practice

REALTOR is a trademark which identifies real estate practitioners who are members of The Canadian Real Estate Association and as such adhere to a strict Code of Ethics.

IN MEMORIAM

BERNICE BOUGHNER — In memory of a dear wife who passed away June 25/89.
Oh, what would I give to clasp your hand;
Your dear kind face to see;
Your loving smile, your welcome voice,
That meant so much to me.
No one knows the silent heartache,
Only those who have such can tell
Of the grief that is borne in silence
For the one I loved so well.
Jack Boughner
32-P-20

BERNICE BOUGHNER — In memory of a dear mother who passed away June 25/89.
To a good life came a peaceful end,
She died as she lived, everyone's friend,
Upright and just in all her ways
Loving and kind to the end of her days.
We saw her suffer, heard her sigh,
We could do nothing but sit close by,
We have lost, but heaven has gained,
One of the best the world contained.
Roy and Marilyn & family, Jack and Marg. & family.
32-P-20

SMITH — In memory of my dear brother Murray who passed away June 19th 1968.
In a quiet country, graveyard
In a place outside of town
It was many many years ago
They laid your body down.
I wasn't there to see you go
Or hear your last faint sigh
I only heard that you were gone
Too late to say goodbye.
I often sit and think of you
When I am all alone
And wonder why God called you
To his eternal home.
Someday I know we'll meet again
In that home way up above.
Until we do I'll think of you
And send you all my love.
Sadly missed by Eileen & Ken.
32-P-20

In loving memory of Lloyd George Heard who was called home to be with the Lord June 21st 1988.
Resting where no shadows fall
In peaceful sleep he awaits us all;
God will link the broken chain
When one by one we meet again.
Ever remembered by his wife Elva Heard and family.
32-P-20

In loving memory of a dear mother, Grandmother and Great Grandmother, Bernice Boughner who passed away June 25, 1989.
God saw you were getting tired,
When a cure was not to be
So he closed his arms around you
And whispered Come to me
You didn't deserve what you went through,
And so he gave you rest.
God's garden must be beautiful,
He only keeps the best.
Sadly missed by Marylou Grenville, and family.
32-P-20

MUELLER, CARL, In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, who passed away June 18, 1989.
It broke my heart to lose you
But you didn't go alone
For part of me went with you.
The day God called you home.
Lovingly remembered by his wife Winnifred and family.
